James Dubro downplays the danger of his profession—he is listed in the phone book and doesn’t drive, Lincoln Clarkes photo.

He recently co-authored a book on Frank Zaneh, a legendary and pioneering RCMP undercover agent, and is currently at work on a history and expose of Canada’s infamous, Nato-extended, organized crime in Canada.

To say that James Dubro knows a lot about organized crime in this country is like saying Dad Adams knows a thing or two about the way to make a campfire. His résumé since the mid-70’s reads like an entirely career for an ambitious investigative journalist.

He authored three best-selling books about mob figures and the Mafia in Canada (Mob Rule: Inside

James Dubro downplays the danger of his profession—he is listed in the phone book and doesn’t drive, Lincoln Clarkes photo.

He recently co-authored a book on Frank Zaneh, a legendary and pioneering RCMP undercover agent, and is currently at work on a history and expose of Canada’s infamous, Nato-extended, organized crime in Canada.

To say that James Dubro knows a lot about organized crime in this country is like saying Dad Adams knows a thing or two about the way to make a campfire. His résumé since the mid-70’s reads like an entirely career for an ambitious investigative journalist.

He authored three best-selling books about mob figures and the Mafia in Canada (Mob Rule: Inside

James Dubro downplays the danger of his profession—he is listed in the phone book and doesn’t drive, Lincoln Clarkes photo.

He recently co-authored a book on Frank Zaneh, a legendary and pioneering RCMP undercover agent, and is currently at work on a history and expose of Canada’s infamous, Nato-extended, organized crime in Canada.

To say that James Dubro knows a lot about organized crime in this country is like saying Dad Adams knows a thing or two about the way to make a campfire. His résumé since the mid-70’s reads like an entirely career for an ambitious investigative journalist.

He authored three best-selling books about mob figures and the Mafia in Canada (Mob Rule: Inside

James Dubro downplays the danger of his profession—he is listed in the phone book and doesn’t drive, Lincoln Clarkes photo.

He recently co-authored a book on Frank Zaneh, a legendary and pioneering RCMP undercover agent, and is currently at work on a history and expose of Canada’s infamous, Nato-extended, organized crime in Canada.

To say that James Dubro knows a lot about organized crime in this country is like saying Dad Adams knows a thing or two about the way to make a campfire. His résumé since the mid-70’s reads like an entirely career for an ambitious investigative journalist.

He authored three best-selling books about mob figures and the Mafia in Canada (Mob Rule: Inside