Young gay men and women in New York City, June 1969. (Photograph by Peter Hujar.)
Workers Vanguard

Campaigned and organized the workers of the local garment workers' unions and claimed the right to organize and join the CTU. The workers of the local garment workers' unions were in the forefront of the struggle for better working conditions and higher wages. The campaign was led by the Workers Vanguard newspaper, which published articles and editorials on the struggle. The campaign was successful, and the workers were able to win significant gains.

Despite their success, the workers faced many challenges, including opposition from the employers and the government. The workers continued to organize and fight for their rights, and the Workers Vanguard newspaper played a crucial role in providing information and support to the workers. The campaign was a significant victory for the working class and showed the power of organizing and fighting for what you believe in.
and we’re not the only ones who think so. We’ve organized this event to bring together people from all walks of life to discuss and address the issues that affect our communities. We believe in the power of solidarity and the strength of collective action. Join us in Chicago, the heart of the Windy City, as we gather to celebrate diversity and bring to light the challenges we face.

The event will feature keynote speakers, panel discussions, and interactive workshops. We’ll also have a rooftop lounge where you can network and socialize with like-minded individuals.

So mark your calendars for June 14th, 2023, and join us for a day of celebration and action. Together, we can make a difference. See you there!