William A. Percy III and Lewis A. Gannett

ACT I

EXT. LEVEE -- DAY

The Mississippi River, early evening, April. TRACKING SHOT of the LEVEE on the river's east side, a sloping fortification against the water's immense volume. A late-19th-century town comes into view. From the levee a pier juts into the river. A steamboat is docked at it. CAPTION:

GREENVILLE, MISSISSIPPI, 1894

EXT. PERCY STREET -- DAY

Early evening, April. A street sign reads: "Percy St." Beyond, a large house with imposing Greek-revival columns.

INT. PERCY HOUSE PARLOR -- DAY

Early evening. The furnishings are upper-class antebellum American Empire, heavy, a bit fusty. Oil paintings on the walls depict Percy ancestors. A large engraving of the Parthenon. CAMILLE and LEROY PERCY, a young, good-looking couple dressed to go out, look at LEROY's mother, MUR, a woman of stately bearing and dimensions. MUR sits with their adorable blond son, WILL, age 9. A younger son, LEROY JR., 3, sits playing with toys at MUR'S feet.

MUR thrusts a heavy iron fire poker into the blazing fireplace.

  LEROY
  Mother, what in the world will you do with that, if a burglar does break in?

  MUR
  Spear him like a chicken liver, honey!

LEROY and CAMILLE smile. WILL and LEROY JR. giggle with delight.

  CAMILLE
  Good night, boys. Don't forget to say your prayers.

WILL waves a good-bye. LEROY, CAMILLE exit. MUR picks up a leather-bound copy of Ivanhoe.

WILL
Mur... What did you do during the War?

MUR
Why, I ran the plantation. No husband to keep the cotton coming, I had to do it. Defend the place, keep the slaves in line.

WILL IMAGINES:

EXT. COTTON FIELD -- DAY

ONE HUNDRED SLAVES PICK COTTON. YOUNG MUR sits in a rocking chair under a shade tree, fanning herself. The only WHITE PERSON in sight, she has a SHOTGUN across her knees.

INT. PERCY PARLOR -- DAY

WILL
You must have been scared.

MUR
I had no time to be scared. We needed the cotton to feed the slaves. In the Delta, we didn’t grow grains. So we had to buy it from other regions. That meant selling our cotton for cash.

MUR points at a portrait of a CONFEDERATE OFFICER.

MUR
Your grandfather. My dear, dear husband.

WILL
The Gray Eagle of the Delta.

WILL IMAGINES:

EXT. CIVIL WAR BATTLEFIELD -- DAY
COL. WILLIAM ALEXANDER PERCY dashingely leads a cavalry charge against a UNION LINE. YANKEES cringe, whimper, FLEE.

AGHAST UNION SOLDIER
God help us! It's the Gray Eagle!

INT. PERCY PARLOR -- DAY

WILL points at Ivanhoe.

WILL
Did Sir Walter Scott write about the Percys?

MUR
Shakespeare did. Hotspur! Your forebears were among the mightiest warriors of the land. Lords of the March!

WILL IMAGINES:

EXT. BORDERLANDS -- DAY

A PERCY EARL, on horseback and magnificently armored, leads a VAST ARMY through BLEAK BORDERLANDS. A CASTLE looms.

INT. PERCY PARLOR -- DAY

WILL blinks, snapping out of it.

WILL
Percys like to fight.
(smiles)
And so did George Armstrong Custer.

MUR
My cousin, the Indian fighter. He had Armstrong blood—and thanks to me, so do you. Like my father, an Indian agent, George was nice to the good Indians, the ones they baptized and civilized. Of course, George did finally make a fatal miscalculation.

WILL IMAGINES:

EXT. WESTERN BATTLEFIELD -- DAY
Indians Slaughter Custer, his troops.

Int. Percy Parlor – Day

Mur

Back in Scotland, the Armstrongs, I believe, were sheep thieves and cattle rustlers. They would sneak into England, raid farms— the sorts the Percy earls were supposed to keep out.

(laughs)

But the Armstrongs have done very well in this country. My grandfather James “Trooper” Armstrong was a general in the War of 1812. He helped Jackson defend New Orleans. Will—do you want to be a soldier?

Will

No, Mur. I want to be a writer.

Mur smiles.

Will

Cousin Kate is a writer.

Mur

Oh! Don't think about that— that awful book Kate wrote!

Will

Why is it so awful?

Mur

Never mind. You should read the novels by our other cousin, Sarah Dorsey. Now, she was a writer. After the War, when Sarah was a young, rich widow, she invited Jeff Davis to stay at Beauvoir, her summer place on the Gulf. There she helped him write his history of the Confederacy.

Will

If Kate is so awful, why are Mother and Father at her party?
MUR

She's kin. We do not shun kin. Besides, she and the General live right next door.

EXT. PERCY GARDEN -- NIGHT

SOUNDS OF a lively party ECHO from beyond a brick wall. WILL, walking through the garden, pauses to listen. He frowns.

INT. FERGUSON HOUSE -- NIGHT

KATE FERGUSON, flush with drink, dances with a YOUNGER MAN. Her husband the GENERAL chats up a YOUNGER WOMAN. CAMILLE PERCY looks on disapprovingly.

CAMILLE
(to LEROY)

A lot of high living in this house.

Amused, LEROY sips a drink. He turns, catches sight of a BEAUTIFUL WOMAN, eyes her. CAMILLE notices, looks away.

EXT. PERCY GARDEN -- DAY

Late September, hot and humid. LEROY JR. plays with a pail and trowel by a flower bed, digging worms for bait, muddying himself. WILL approaches, dressed in his SUNDAY BEST. He eyes LEROY JR. with distaste, walks off.

LEROY SR. sits at a garden table some distance away with a DISTINGUISHED-LOOKING FRIEND (JOHN PARKER) about his age (33). Both wear hunting boots, tweeds. Two shotguns lie on the table. LEROY eyes WILL.

LEROY

A queer chicken, that one. I scarcely can imagine where he came from.

FRIEND smiles, glances at LEROY JR. A BLACK BUTLER walks up with frosted drinks on a tray. FRIEND takes one, sips.

FRIEND

Willis, you make the best juleps.

WILLIS

Thank you, Mr. Parker.
INT. PERCY FRONT HALL -- DAY

WILL approaches CAMILLE. She too is dressed for church.

    WILL
    Time to go.

CAMILLE nods, frowns. MUR enters.

    WILL
    Mur, won’t you come to church with us?

    MUR
    I’m a devout Presbyterian, Will. Incense does not enchant me, and anyway, I’ve forgotten my Latin.

CAMILLE and MUR exchange combative glances.

INT. CATHOLIC CHURCH -- DAY

A PRIEST celebrates Mass. From a pew WILL avidly takes it all in. CAMILLE suppresses a yawn, glances at WILL. His devotion impresses her. Or perhaps alarms her.

INT. PERCY FRONT HALL -- NIGHT

LEROY and CAMILLE stand in the hall. Rain POUNDS the verandah's roof. LEROY kisses CAMILLE, goes out. WILL approaches.

    WILL
    Where is Father going?

    CAMILLE
    He has business to attend to.

CAMILLE heads upstairs. WILL goes into the parlor. MUR sits by the fire with Ivanhoe.

    WILL
    Father always goes out at night. Why doesn't he stay at home with us?

    MUR
Your father is a very busy man. Now you sit down. Let’s read more Ivanhoe.

INT. GENTLEMEN’S CLUB -- NIGHT

Rain pounds windows. Well-to-do WHITE MEN converse, play cards, fill plates at a SUMPTUOUS BUFFET. ELIZA, a regal high-yellow black woman, presides. Her THREE GORGEOUS GRANDDAUGHTERS, beautifully dressed, flirt with WHITE MEN. The only other women present are TWO UNIFORMED BLACK MAIDS.

The doorbell rings. A MAID opens the door.

KATE FERGUSON stands on the porch wearing a raincoat and hat. MAID is utterly shocked.

MAID
Missas Fergesson!

KATE sweeps in, removes coat; she wears a low-cut dress. Stunned silence greets her entry. KATE advances on the buffet table, seats herself at the head.

KATE
Please bring me some Champagne.

MAID hurries off.

EXT. ELIZA’S CLUB, FRONT PORCH -- NIGHT

Rain. LEROY PERCY presses the doorbell. Wide-eyed MAID opens it.

LEROY
Something wrong?

LEROY enters. The atmosphere is subdued except for one voice: KATE's, chatting with an attractive YOUNG MAN.

KATE
Have you read my novel, Clicquot?

YOUNG MAN
I understand it's very--racy.

Kate laughs raucously.
KATE
Some people think so. The same bores who think I don't belong in a place like this!

KATE sees LEROY.

KATE
Hi, LeRoy.

LEROY
(masks his shock)
Well hello there, Cousin Kate.
(to MAID:)
A toddy, you know how I like it.

EXT. ELIZA'S CLUB, FRONT PORCH -- NIGHT

Rain. GENERAL FERGUSON rings the doorbell. MAID opens it.

MAID
Gennrall!

Silence once again sweeps the establishment. FERGUSON goes in, sees KATE, nods to her, takes the situation completely in stride. He turns to the flabbergasted but amused LEROY.

FERGUSON
Let's talk business for a minute.

FERGUSON glances at windows shuddering from the force of rain.

FERGUSON
I'm worried about the levee. We're getting so much water.

LEROY
We buttressed it just last month.
(sips drink, eyes Ferguson)
Remember? You signed the checks.

Ferguson nods vigorously. One of ELIZA's GRANDAUGHTERS catches his eye. In the background, KATE helps herself to more Champagne.

KATE
(to YOUNG MAN)
You really must read Clicquot.

INT. PERCY HOUSE, STAIRCASE -- NIGHT

Rain and wind rattle windows. WILL and MUR climb the stairs. They head down a corridor, pause outside a closed door.

Beyond it, SOUND OF: SOFT SOBS.

WILL wants to go in, MUR stops him with a finger to her mouth. They move on.

WILL

Father is wicked! Where is he, Mur-- it's almost midnight!

MUR clamps a hand over his mouth.

EXT. DOWNTOWN GREENVILLE -- DAY

Bright sun reflects from THREE FEET OF FLOODWATER. Elevated planks form makeshift sidewalks above the water.

Sign on a building: "Levee Board."

INT. LEVEE BOARD OFFICE -- DAY

LEROY, GENERAL FERGUSON, LEVEE BOARD MEMBERS sit at a table.

FERGUSON

There must have been more we could've done.

LEROY

There always is.

(lights a cigar)

But we know that from time to time...

(stabs the air with cigar)

It's been the same since my father built the first levees hereabouts. The river will always have her say.

EXT. FLOODED STREET -- DAY
A motorboat idles, tethered to a platform. LEROY crosses the platform to the boat, followed by butler WILLIS and WILL, who clutches The Last of the Mohicans. They get in the boat.

WILLIS
Where we going, Mr. Percy?

LEROY
The old Percy place. I want to show my boy some history.

(to WILL)
Mother kept the Yankees out, the hands working—but she couldn't stop floods. We'll inspect conditions. Is that OK with you, Son?

WILL nods, opens his book, starts reading.

EXT. FLOODED COUNTRYSIDE -- DAY

The boat motors through a vast expanse of FLOODED COUNTRYSIDE. Sun reflects brightly from brown water. WILL sits in the bow, his nose poked in his book. LEROY regards him with exasperation.

LEROY
Your first flood! Behold what the Father of Waters has done to man and beast!

WILL squints at the water.

WILL
The glare is terrible! And it stinks!

The boat passes a tree. WILL stares at it. Something MOVES in a branch. WILL SHRIEKS, points:

WILL Snakes!

A number of branches are ALIVE WITH SNAKES.

LEROY
Where do you expect them to go? Willis, take us closer.
WILLIS steers closer to the tree.

WILL Don't! Watch out! They might fall in!

LEROY
That's the thing about floods, Will. Livestock, dogs, snakes, people--everything needs to escape the water. Only the turtles and fish are safe.

WILL
Can we go home now? It's so humid!

WILL resumes reading. LEROY sighs.

INT. CHURCH CONFESSIONAL -- DAY

WILL faces the screen. A PRIEST sits on the other side.

PRIEST
You're the best boy in this parish.
(chuckles)
I think you make things up. You invent excuses to come here all the time.

WILL
I must be pure, like you. And Mother.

PRIEST
Pure? You already are! And Will--
(pause)
Your father is our leading man, our very finest. Don't you worry about him. You come from a long line of great men. You should be proud!

WILL ponders that idea.

INT. PERCY PARLOR -- DAY

WILL and CAMILLE sit, facing each other.

WILL
I have made an important decision. I want to become a priest.
CAMILLE
A priest!
(frowns)
Don't you want to have children?

Will shakes his head. MUR strides in.

MUR
A priest? What's this about a priest?

CAMILLE
(to WILL)
Percys must have sons! Mur and your father insist on it, to carry on the line!

WILL
Why can't little brother LeRoy carry it on?

MUR and CAMILLE look at each other, highly alarmed.

MUR
It's that school, Camille, which you've inflicted on this poor child. And that church! What's next? Will the boy want to become a merchant like your family? Making money, shirking honor?

CAMILLE
My family embodies the traditions of France! There are none more noble!

EXT. CONVENT SCHOOL -- DAY

A warm September day. Sign on school building: "Sisters of Mercy School for Boys." CAMILLE and WILL enter the school, WILL in a blue jacket and tie with white knickers.

INT. SCHOOL HALLWAY -- DAY

PUPILS dressed like WILL mingle in the hallway. A tiny but vigorous NUN herds them through a classroom door.

CAMILLE
Sister Evangelist--
SISTER EVANGELIST
Ah, Mrs. Percy. Will, get in to class.

WILL enters the classroom.

CAMILLE
May I have a word with you?

INT. CONVENT SCHOOL OFFICE -- DAY

SISTER EVANGELIST faces CAMILLE from behind a desk.

CAMILLE
I'm sure you’ve been a good influence.

SISTER EVANGELIST
(distressed)
Will he go to the public school?

CAMILLE
No, I don't think so, some of the boys--the bullies. Will is so sensitive.

SISTER EVANGELIST
He is an angel!

CAMILLE nods, wearily.

INT. LEVEE BOARD OFFICE -- DAY

An overhead fan stirs sultry air. A SWEATING ACCOUNTANT goes through a thick ledger, checking figures. He shakes his head.

EXT. GREENVILLE NEWSSTAND -- DAY

LEVEE BOARD SHORT $30,000
Questions for Gen. Ferguson

EXT. PERCY GARDEN -- NIGHT

WILL sits very still, holding a book, listening to LOUD SOBS coming from the FERGUSON place next door.
WILL looks at the book: Clicquot by Catherine Ferguson. He grimaces at it, clutches it tightly, opens it, slams it shut. With a cry he throws it to the ground.

EXT. CEMETERY -- DAY

Late summer. WILL carries a book and a bouquet of flowers to a plot marked PERCY, approaches a grave: Nannie Armstrong Percy, 1835-1897. He sits, opens Rob Roy, reads.

WILL REMEMBERS:

INT. PERCY PARLOR -- NIGHT

MUR and WILL cuddle before the fireplace with an iron poker thrust in it, MUR reading Ivanhoe to WILL.

EXT. CEMETERY -- DAY

WILL
(to gravestone)
Mur! It's no fun anymore!

WILL closes Rob Roy, dejectedly walks away from the grave.

EXT. BALLPARK -- DAY

Early Autumn, 1899. In knickers, 14-year-old WILL sits on bleachers with his parents at a rustic baseball field. Though slight of build, he has bloomed into a BEAUTIFUL ADOLESCENT. As usual he's reading a book. His parents watch a game in progress.

At bat: LEROY JR., now eight, shirtless and barefoot, VIBRATING WITH ANIMAL MAGNETISM. A pitch: LEROY whacks the ball far beyond the boy in right field. LEROY SR. and CAMILLE jump to their feet, applauding and cheering.

WILL does not look up from his book.

INT. PERCY HOUSE, ATTIC GUN ROOM -- DAY

LEROYS SR. and JR. clean shotguns, SR. giving JR. tips. WILL looks in. Neither LEROY notices, so absorbed are they in the task at hand. WILL's face droops. He slips away.

EXT. PERCY GARDEN -- DAY
Autumn. A garden party is in progress. GENTEEL LADIES wearing large hats, PROSPEROUS HUSBANDS with boaters and canes, a number of YOUNG PEOPLE. WILL converses with a SPINSTERISH LADY. He is charming, vivacious.

A PRETTY GIRL walks by, casts WILL a glance. WILL catches it but turns away, resumes talk with LADY. Downcast, GIRL walks away.

From a distance, LEROY and JOHN PARKER have observed the snub.

LEROY
What am I going to do with that boy? He won't hunt with me. He hates sports.

PARKER
(tactfully clears throat)
Who's the lady?

LEROY
His English tutor, Carrie Stern. A poet. Will goes over to her house, stays hours and hours on end... They recite Byron, Shelley, Tennyson!

LEROY JR., shirtless, rides a pony bareback into the garden. He's sweaty and his eyes shine with excitement. LEROY SR. beams at him. CAMILLE approaches him.

CAMILLE
Where have you been?

LEROY JR. holds up a lidded pail.

LEROY JR.
Crawfish!

CAMILLE
Well get them right in to Cook. And take yourself a bath!

GUESTS laugh. JOHN PARKER leans toward LEROY.

PARKER
He's fine. A chip off the old block.
LEROY nods, looks over for WILL. He and CARRIE have disappeared.

INT. PERCY PARLOR -- DAY

A large Christmas tree is brightly decorated. LEROY, CAMILLE, and WILL sit before the blazing fireplace.

LEROY
How far will poetry get you, Will?

WILL shrugs.

LEROY
We have decided that your education should take a different course. You will attend Sewanee Military Academy next fall.

WILL is stunned. He IMAGINES:

EXT. SCHOOLYARD CORNER -- DAY

CADETS--brutal, leering--TORMENT WILL.

INT. PERCY DINING ROOM -- DAY

CAMILLE
There is another possibility.

LEROY
The Academy is affiliated with my alma mater, Sewanee. You're a bit young to be entering college. But with your Greek and Latin--you might get in.

INT. GREENVILLE TRAIN STATION -- DAY

A bright Fall day. LEROY and CAMILLE see WILL off.

EXT. COUNTRY ROAD -- DAY

A taxi takes WILL up a mountain road and then through the gates of The University of the South at Sewanee. Set on the Cumberland Plateau amid valley-cloven mountains, the location is idyllic.

INT. SEWANEE DINING HALL -- DAY

WILL mingles with fellow STUDENTS. Although he is not the only one wearing knickers under his black gown, he looks like he should be entering high school, not college. But he's game.

A dapper, good-looking YOUNG INSTRUCTOR approaches WILL.

YOUNG INSTRUCTOR

I'm Huger Jervey. I understand that you take an interest in literature?

WILL

(smiles)

Yes! How'd you know?

HUGER (pronounced "Hugger")

The Admissions Office tells us things like that. I teach romance languages and literature. Have you read Dante?

Intrigued, WILL shakes his head.

EXT. WOODS -- DAY

WILL walks through sunlight-dappled woods. He hears a VOICE, walks toward it. He comes to a glade. In it TWO STUDENTS lie on moss, flat on their backs. One is reading to the other:

STUDENT # 1

I will think in gold and dream in silver, imagine in marble and in bronze conceive...

STUDENT # 1 stops reading. He and the other STUDENT prop themselves on elbows, facing each other, eyes blazing with inspiration.

Wrestle?

Sure.

They wrestle on the moss, a FURIOUS, SUDDEN STRUGGLE. STUDENT # 1 pins # 2 on his back. They GLARE at each other. Then # 1 kisses # 2. They melt into an ARDENT EMBRACE.

WILL reaction: FASCINATED HORROR. He runs away.

INT. HUGER JERVEY'S OFFICE, DAY

WILL, agitated, sits in a chair. HUGER sits at his desk.

    HUGER
    I'm sure they were just fooling around.

    WILL
    Like--like that?

HUGER sighs, taps a fingernail on the desk.

    WILL
    Will. Please listen carefully. Sometimes--boys your age become very fond of special friends. It doesn't mean anything alarming.

WILL'S eyebrows shoot up. HUGER smiles.

    HUGER
    But it must not be discussed with anyone. People might get the wrong idea.

    WILL
    I can't even--can I talk about it with you?

    HUGER
    (with sudden gravity)
    Some day, perhaps. Not now. And do not speak with anyone about what you saw.

INT. DORM HALLWAY -- DAY

WILL speaks into the communal dorm telephone:

    WILL
    It's wonderful here, Mother. I like my teachers. And I'm making friends!

EXT. TENNIS COURT -- DAY

Autumn, WILL’s second year at Sewanee. WILL watches STUDENT # 1 of the GLADE INCIDENT win a tennis match.

    OFFICIAL
    The trophy goes to Bixby Perkins!

WILL is deeply impressed.

INT. HUGER JERVEY'S CLASSROOM -- DAY

HUGER delivers a lecture, liberally sprinkled with Italian, about Michelangelo. WILL pays attention but keeps an eye on BIXBY PERKINS, who sits nearby. BIXBY glances over and catches WILL's stare.

After class, BIXBY approaches WILL.

    BIXBY
    Do you know the work of Addington Symonds? Jervey adores it!

WILL shakes his head.

    BIXBY
    Come with me. I'll introduce you.

WILL follows the ebullient BIXBY.

EXT. WOODS -- DAY

BIXBY, carrying a book, leads WILL through woods to the same mossy glade. WILL is jittery, sweating. They sit.

    BIXBY
    What's the matter?

His hands shaking, WILL undoes the top button of BIXBY's shirt.

    BIXBY
    Hey!

Both boys grin, BIXBY amazed, WILL in a fever.
They CLUTCH each other, roll across moss.

INT. HUGER JERVEY'S OFFICE -- DAY

WILL sits in a chair, HUGER sits behind his desk.

WILL
I have something to tell you.

HUGER
Something important, I gather.

WILL
I have a special friend.

HUGER raises his eyebrows.

WILL Bixby Perkins.

HUGER laughs. WILL grins. HUGER puts a finger to his lips: "Be quiet about this." WILL nods.

WILL
Now I have ask you something. Can I-- can I have only one special friend?

HUGER
Well. Ah. Well, I suppose that-- Why do you ask?

WILL
I think I'm in love with you.

WILL and HUGER stare at each other.

INT. PERCY HOUSE FRONT HALL -- DAY

Autumn. CAMILLE is on the phone. In the background, LEROY JR. comes down the stairs carrying luggage and a rifle. A FRIEND of LEROY'S, like LEROY a limber lad, follows with more luggage.

CAMILLE
Will, we're going to Hot Springs for a week. Father, LeRoy Jr., his friend Tom, and me. Father and the boys will hunt, I will enjoy the spa and shop, I suppose.

WILL (OC)
Have a wonderful time.

INT. DORM HALLWAY -- DAY

Several days later. A still afternoon at WILL's dorm. CLOSE On the phone: It RINGS. A STUDENT runs to answer it.

CAMILLE (OC)
I must speak with Will Percy.

INT. DORM HALLWAY -- DAY

A minute later. WILL comes to the phone.

WILL Hello?

CAMILLE (OC)
(tremulous)
Your brother has been shot. An accident with Tom. I've got doctors here, they're probing for the bullet, it's in his stomach--they can't seem to find it.

WILL IMAGINES:

INT. HOSPITAL ROOM -- DAY

LEROY JR. WRITHES WITH PAIN on a hospital bed, DOCTORS helplessly looking on, LEROY SR. and CAMILLE DISTRAUGHT.

EXT. PERCY GRAVEYARD PLOT -- DAY

Autumn. FAMILY and FRIENDS are gathered around an open grave. A PRIEST says words.

LEROY and Camille barely can stand. JOHN PARKER approaches to sympathize. LEROY waves him off.

PARKER turns, sees WILL standing a few feet away, a hand on MUR's gravestone. WILL is wretched, nauseous.

PARKER
(under his breath)
My God. It's come to this.

ACT II

INT. GREENVILLE TRAIN STATION -- DAY

May, 1905. CAMILLE and LEROY watch a train roll in.

WILL, AGE 20 and nattily dressed, gets off the train.

CAMILLE

There he is!

WILL approaches, kisses CAMILLE, shakes LEROY's hand.

LEROY

The world traveler.

A SWEATING BLACK PORTER wheels up steamship trunks, HEAVILY STAMPED: "FIRST CLASS"; various ports of destination: "LIVERPOOL," "PIRAEUS," "PALERMO," "CAIRO."

WILL

It wasn't my first tour, Father.

CAMILLE

The first on your own. Welcome home!

WILL smiles. He looks at dusty, torrid Greenville. His smile fades.

INT. PERCY PARLOR -- NIGHT

A festive party. JOHN PARKER (LEROY'S friend), CARRIE STERN (WILL'S English tutor), various RELATIVES and FRIENDS.

PARKER and LEROY observe WILL talking with CARRIE STERN.

WILL

Luxor by moonlight--incomparable. Notre Dame in every light--just as Monet painted it, Carrie! And those dreamy Tuscan hill towns--Perugia is the finest, I found.

CARRIE
Did you versify?

PARKER
(to LEROY)
Dreamy hill towns. What's next for him?

LEROY
Law school, I reckon.

PARKER nods. He walks over to WILL.

PARKER
May I have a word with you?

WILL
(a little taken aback)
Sure.

INT. PERCY LIBRARY -- NIGHT

WILL and PARKER enter. PARKER closes the door.

PARKER
I’ll be blunt. What are you going to do with your life?

WILL
I don’t exactly know, Mr. Parker.

PARKER
Your father is building an empire. He’s the richest man in the Delta, one of the strongest in the South. A senate seat is his for the asking but he has too much going on here. Plantations of 30,000 acres! He’s expanding railroads, he rules the levees--Will, your family has a history in these parts. How will you add to that?

WILL
Mr. Parker, I am twenty years old. I do not know.

PARKER glowers at WILL.

WILL
I’ll think of something.

EXT. GREENVILLE LEVEE -- DAY

Summer. WILL and CARRIE STERN walk the levee. On one side flows the huge river. On the other side, FORTY FEET BELOW, lackluster Greenville SIMMERS IN HEAT. WILL pauses, looks at the town.

WILL
Carrie, this place will kill me.

CARRIE
I've managed to survive it.
(laughs)
With the help of toddies and frequent trips to New Orleans! So tell me. What exactly did you do in Paris?

Will REMEMBERS:

EXT. LUXEMBOURG GARDENS -- DAY

Summer. VARIOUS VISITORS: CLINGING LOVERS, MOTHERS with CHILDREN, OLD MEN PLAYING CROCQUET, SOLITARY STROLLING YOUNG MEN.

A HANDSOME STROLLING MAN sees something, stops. WILL, seated in a metal chair, looks up from a book: EYE CONTACT with MAN.

INT. NARROW STAIRWELL -- DAY

WILL and LUXEMBOURG GARDENS MAN rapidly ascend stairs.

INT. CRAMPED ATTIC APARTMENT -- DAY

WILL and MAN BARGE INTO the apartment.

WILL, MAN embrace, CRASH ONTO a narrow bed.

EXT. GREENVILLE LEVEE -- DAY

WILL
The Luxembourg Gardens. I sat there for hours and hours. It’s the friendliest place I’ve ever been.
(pause)
I can hardly breathe here.
(pause)
Father mentioned law school.

CARRIE Where?

WILL
His school, Virginia. But that's too-- rustic.

CARRIE
Mr. Jefferson's university is hardly rustic.

WILL
For the likes of me, it is.

They look at each other. A moment of understanding.

EXT. IVY-COVERED BRICK BUILDING -- DAY

Autumn. Sign: "Winthrop Hall." WILL enters it.

INT. LECTURE HALL -- DAY

A STIFFLY DIGNIFIED PROFESSOR addresses a group of seated
STUDENTS, including WILL.

PROFESSOR
I am Professor Williston. Welcome to Harvard Law School.

(steely smile)
As first-year students with the misfortune of not having attended the

EDGY LAUGHTER.

WILLISTON
You deserve a special welcome. Some of
exotic locales. Very exotic indeed.
For example...

(gazes at WILL)
Mississippi.
MORE LAUGHTER. WILL smiles politely.

EXT. BRATTLE STREET, CAMBRIDGE -- NIGHT

WILL and a COMPANION, dressed in black tie, walk down the street, eyeing large homes.

    WILL
    It's so funny, Gus. They think we're hicks.

    GUS
    (gestures at a house, Southern accent)
    You could fit two of those in our Garden District place.

WILL checks the street number.

    WILL
    It’s next door. Are you ready for this?

    GUS
    Of course. My Grandaddy killed dozens of the bastards.

    WILL
    Mine killed hundreds.

They walk to the front door. WILL rings the bell. A UNIFORMED WHITE BUTLER opens the door.

    GUS
    Howdy!

BUTLER stiffens.

INT. ELEGANT PARLOR -- NIGHT

PROFESSOR WILLISTON and his WIFE preside over conversation among eight GUESTS. Atmosphere: Yankee ULTRA-RECTITUDE.

    PROF. WILLISTON
    (to a GUEST)
    Yes, Katherine, I saw that in the Transcript. A lovely old family, the Shaws.
Neither as distinguished nor as old as ours, of course...

BUTLER shows in WILL and GUS.

PROF. WILLISTON
Here you are, our two Southern gentlemen, welcome. Mrs. Wells, I present to you Mr. William Percy and Mr. Gustavus Westfeldt, of the best old families, I

INT. WILLISTON DINING ROOM -- NIGHT

MALE GUESTS seat FEMALE GUESTS at a well-laid table. Silver glimmers. With insouciant charm GUS seats MRS. WILLISTON at the table's foot.

MRS. WILLISTON
You have fine manners, young man.

GUS bows gallantly, sits in the chair to her left. WILL sits to the left of PROF. WILLISTON at the table's head.

Chivalry, Mr. Westfeldt. A vanishing virtue.

GUS
Not where I come from, Professor.

Behind PROF. WILLISTON, to WILL'S right, an ENORMOUS CANARY
CAGE looms. Numerous birds softly SING.

Large linen napkins, ELABORATELY FOLDED, adorn each plate.
WILL studies his napkin, pinches a corner. With great vivacity:

WILL
Nothing is more important, of course, than good breeding...

As if to illustrate his point WILL gracefully but sharply flicks his napkin to his right, to undo the fold.
From within the napkin a SMALL DINNER ROLL HURTLES TOWARD THE CANARY CAGE, bangs into it: RESOUNDING WIRY TWANGS.

BIRDS SCREECH, VIOLENTLY FLUTTER. TWANGS REVERBERATE.

A FROZEN MOMENT. TIME DILATION, WILL POV: NO ONE SO MUCH AS BATS AN EYELASH.

EXCEPT GUS: He finds a roll tucked in his own napkin, buries his face in the napkin, his shoulders heaving.

TWANGS, SCREECHES fade. MRS. WILLISTON looks at BUTLER. With serene hauteur:

MRS. WILLISTON
We will proceed with the soup course.

EXT. BRATTLE STREET -- NIGHT

Convulsing with laughter, arms around each others' shoulders, WILL and GUS weave down the street.

GUS
What is wrong with them?

WILL
That birdcage! Back home, folks would have had the decency--to applaud. Or at least, to laugh!

GUS halts, draws himself up. With somber seriousness:

GUS
It's why they won the War. They're not human. Cold as--as reptiles.

WILL
(sighs with resignation)
Yes. That's it.

EXT. WEINBERG BUILDING, DOWNTOWN GREENVILLE -- DAY

June. A SWEATING WORKER attaches a sign to the building: "PERCY & PERCY, Attorneys at Law."

INT. PERCY & PERCY LAW OFFICE - DAY
Overhead fans circle. LEROY sits at a desk cluttered with papers and mementos. WILL, AGE 23, sits at a table entirely bare except for a stack of folders. He picks up the top folder, opens it.

WILL
A train has killed a cow. We must defend the train.

LEROY
Better than defending the cow.

WILL grimaces at the folder.

INT. PERCY DINING ROOM -- NIGHT

WILLIS, older now, serves dinner to WILL, LEROY, CAMILLE.

CAMILLE
Have you thought about getting a pied-à-terre?

WILL
Plenty of room here, don't you think?

CAMILLE
Yes. And it has been lonely.

WILL imagines:

INT. HOSPITAL ROOM -- DAY

LEROY JR. writhes in pain on the bed, DOCTORS helplessly looking on, LEROY SR. and CAMILLE distraught.

INT. PERCY DINING ROOM -- NIGHT

LEROY
I hope you will stay here with us.
(pause)
At least until you marry.

CAMILLE nods. Then she looks at WILL. He studies his plate, not meeting her eyes.

INT. PERCY & PERCY LAW OFFICE -- DAY
December, 1909. WILL sits at his desk, reading briefs. His phone rings. WILL answers.

WILL Law office of Percy & Percy.

PHONE VOICE
May I speak with Mr. Percy?

WILL Speaking.

PHONE VOICE
Mr. LeRoy Percy?

WILL
This is William Percy. Who is calling?

PHONE VOICE
Governor Noel’s office. The Governor must speak with Mr. LeRoy Percy.

WILL straightens in his chair.

WILL
My father is in Arkansas. May I help you with something?

PHONE VOICE
Senator McLaurin died this morning. Unexpectedly, needless to say. The legislature will be convening to elect a successor. Governor Noel has urgent reasons to speak with your father.

INT. PERCY DINING ROOM – NIGHT

Elderly WILLIS serves dinner to WILL, LEROY, CAMILLE, and JOHN PARKER.

LEROY
I don’t want it.

PARKER
Then Vardaman will get it. You want that?
WILLIS stumbles, almost dropping the platter he’s carrying. A silence: DINERS register his reaction.

LEROY
Of course not, Vardaman’s the worst sort of trash. He was a bad governor. We do not need him in Washington.

PARKER
If you don’t stop him, who will?

LEROY ponders the question. WILLIS exits.

PARKER
I’ve got thousands of acres lying fallow for the lack of labor. The coloreds are going north, to factory jobs. If the likes of Vardaman take over—LeRoy, we are in trouble.

LEROY
The legislature meets in two months! How can I mount a campaign in time?

PARKER
The fact of the matter is, you could have any office in this state, if you set your mind to it.

He’s right, Father.

PARKER is surprised to get support from WILL.

WILL
We’ll put the law practice on hold. We’ll enlist Uncle Walker and Uncle Willie. And, I don’t know, rent a hotel suite in Jackson. We’ll do whatever it takes.

PARKER
(to LEROY)
It’s about time and I’m so glad to hear it.

(to WILL)
GRAPHIC: SILENT NEWSREEL FOOTAGE

NEWSREEL CAPTION: “JAMES VARDAMAN, LEADING CANDIDATE for the U.S. SENATE from MISSISSIPPI.”

VARDAMAN

If it is necessary, every Negro in the state will be lynched--it will be done to maintain white supremacy!

AUDIENCE stands to give a frenzied ovation.

EXT. EDWARDS HOUSE HOTEL, JACKSON, MI -- DAY

WILL and LEROY get out of a cab in front of the hotel. A BELL HOP takes charge of their several suitcases.

INT. LOBBY, EDWARDS HOUSE HOTEL – DAY

Lobby is bustling with all manner of POLITICIANS, LOBBYISTS, HUCKSTERS, a number of VAGUELY SHADY WOMEN.

LEROY and WILL enter the lobby. Heads turn, a buzz of recognition. A SLICK POL rushes up to LEROY.

SLICK POL

Mr. Percy!

LEROY

There you are, Crump. How’re we doing?

CRUMP

We can’t talk down here. Too many spies.

INT. SUITE, EDWARDS HOUSE HOTEL -- DAY

WILL, LEROY, and CRUMP sit at a table in the luxurious suite’s sitting room.

WILL
What are the chances, Mr. Crump?

CRUMP
Vardaman has the momentum and is seen as the likely winner. But the legislature is a circus, especially the democratic caucus. Governor Noel is promoting a bunch of minor candidates with no chance of winning, to give us time to build Percy support. It’s going to be a bit of a brawl, gentlemen.

LEROY
We’re in it to win. What do we need?

BRODIE

WILL
Isn’t that—a little risky? The Vardaman people have already cast Father as a high-living Delta aristocrat.

BRODIE
Yes, but those rednecks secretly love the whole aristocrat thing. It’s like a seduction, Will...

Two WELL-DRESSED GENTLEMEN enter.

LEROY
Walker! Willie!

LEROY rises, hugs them. WILLIE is grossly overweight.

LEROY
(to CRUMP)
You know my brothers, Walker and Willie.

CRUMP
A pleasure to see you! The leading legal lights of Birmingham and Memphis—with just the right connections to work that mob downstairs.

LEROY
(to WALKER and WILLIE)
My experienced campaign manager informs me that we need girls. And liquor.

CRUMP
And card games.

The THREE PERCY BROTHERS look at each other, grin.

WILLIE
That will not be a problem.

WILL stirs uneasily in his chair.

INT. HOTEL ROOM -- NIGHT

WALKER PERCY pours three fingers of bourbon into a tumbler, takes it to a FLORID MAN seated at a card table with a number of POLITICAL HACKS. Cigar smoke tinges the air.

WALKER
There you are, Mr. Robinson.

(sips)
Ahhh! Trust the Percys to serve only the best.

SOUND OF: A knock on the door. WALKER opens it. TWO VAGUELY SHADY-LOOKING WOMEN enter.

SHADY-LOOKING WOMAN #1
I am Mrs. Carrol Neil, and my friend here is Mrs. Ruby Hall.

WALKER
I’m Walker Percy. What may I--

(calls out)
Ruby! What’s happening at the Lemon Hotel?

(to WALKER)
Her husband manages it. Vardaman’s crowd is staying there.

RUBY
Well, we thought you might have an interest in that...

WALKER
Have a seat, ladies. Drink?

(steely smile)
I’d love one.

WILL enters, does a double-take at CARROL and RUBY.

INT. EDWARDS HOUSE DINING ROOM -- NIGHT

WILL, LEROY, WALKER, WILLIE, and CRUMP dine.

WILL
(to WALKER)
Who were those two women in your room, Uncle Walker?

WALKER
Ladies on the make. Looking to sell gossip. And maybe more than that.

WILL
They sure seemed that way.

WALKER
I get the distinct impression that many members of the caucus are for sale. And that almost everybody else in this town is as well.

CRUMP
Of course. That’s politics.

WILL
Are you proposing that we do some shopping?

CRUMP
I wouldn’t put it quite that way. But the Percy connections can do favors that will get us votes. A lot of the reps are small-town lawyers. Looking for railroad work. Corporate clients.
WILLIE
We do indeed have those connections.

CRUMP
What we want to avoid, of course, is any suggestion of...
  (lowers his voice)
Outright bribery.

WILL
Discreet bribery...?

CRUMP
Yes. But keep something in mind. This election is a contest in the state legislature to fill McLaurin’s unexpired term. August after next there will be a statewide primary—a popular vote—to nominate a democrat to fill a full term. Since democrats always win in Mississippi these days, the primary winner will go to Washington.
  (pause)
The point is this. Wheeling and dealing with state legislators is one thing. Favors, and so on. But winning votes from the general public is a different ball game. Vardaman as you know is a master demagogue. We can’t give him reasons to charge that we bought this election.

LEROY nods, exchanges glances with BROTHERS and WILL.

INT. STATE CAPITOL CHAMBER -- DAY

Two weeks later. In the packed chamber, a caucus vote is underway. LEROY stands near the rostrum. VARDAMAN paces, shaking his mane of hair.

CLERK
The final tally, 87 to 82, goes to LeRoy Percy, senator-elect!

Chamber ERUPTS with cheers, boos. VARDAMAN runs down rostrum steps, runs back up, waving arms, SHOUTING:

VARDAMAN
Black as the night that covers me!
Black as the night that covers me!

CLOSE UP: WILL and CRUMP watching from the floor: They’re elated. But VARDAMAN’S mad tantrum rivets them.

WILL
He’s out of his mind.

CRUMP
And all the more dangerous.

INT. PERCY FRONT HALL – NIGHT

WALKER and WILLIE PERCY admit guests, almost as if at a nightclub, from a HUGE THRONG of PERCY SUPPORTERS outside the house. LEROY and CAMILLE, both weary, greet GUESTS in the parlor. Jubilant FRIENDS drink, carouse.

BLACK SERVANTS, including a WINSOME TEENAGER, serve drinks.

In a corner of the parlor, WILL observes the goings on. JOHN PARKER approaches him.

PARKER
That was an impressive operation in Jackson. Congratulations.

WILL
Thank you, Mr. Parker.

PARKER
But Vardaman will be tough to beat, in a statewide vote. Are you ready?

WILL
It’ll be ugly. But we’re determined. Meantime--let’s celebrate.

PARKER
Will you be lonely in this house, with your parents in Washington?

WILL makes eye contact with WINSOME TEENAGER, who sends him a fleeting grin.

WILL
No, Mr. Parker. I don’t believe I will.

INT. PERCY & PERCY LAW OFFICE -- DAY

Early March, 1910. WILL sits at his desk. CRUMP enters.

CRUMP
Have you heard the news?

WILL News?

CRUMP
State Senator Bilbo announced that a Percy supporter bribed him to vote for your father.

WILL
Bilbo? That Vardaman hack? Who’s the supposed supporter?

CRUMP
Lorraine Dulaney. A man of means with a dubious reputation. He hates Vardaman but he’s no friend of your father’s. Perfect, in a way. Bilbo wants to get rid of both Dulaney and Percy. He faked the bribery to take down both.

WILL
That is ridiculous.

CRUMP takes a seat, throws up his arms.

CRUMP
It’s a strange situation. But get this: Bilbo claims that none other than Ruby Hall and Carrol Neil approached him on Dulaney’s behalf. To offer the money.

WILL
Those two wenches? Those hookers? Who will believe them?

CRUMP
Who knows? By the way, Bilbo says he took the money, $645 in all, but put

WILL

Oh, God. The whole thing was a set-up. We should have known. Ruby’s husband manages the Lemon Hotel—Vardaman headquarters.

CRUMP

I smell an investigation, Will. Let’s get your father on the phone. The accusation that Carol and Ruby were Percy operators, giving out bribes—we can’t let it stand.

INT. STATE CAPITOL ANTEROOM -- DAY

CRUMP, WILL, and WILL’s UNCLE WILLIE sit in the anteroom. Beyond a closed door: SOUNDS OF official proceedings.

WILL

How’d it go testifying before the Senate, Uncle Willie?

WILLIE

The Vardaman goons got some decrepit senator to say that I offered him a consulship in Japan.

WILL

Well. Did you?

CRUMP' laughs: Maybe he did, maybe he didn’t.

WILL’S UNCLE WALKER strides into the room carrying a briefcase.

WALKER

CRUMP

The affidavits?

WALKER
From the Chattanooga police. It seems Carrol Neil is well known there as an extortionist, flesh-peddler, and whore. A professional grifter.

WILL
How does that help us?

CRUMP
We show that Bilbo’s witnesses are con artists. But you have a point.

WILL raises his eyebrows.

CRUMP
Even if the legislature believes that LeRoy did no wrong—the smear remains. (grimaces)
The election is still well over a year away. But we’ve got to get the Senator out before the public. We could get killed by this.

INT. PERCY LIBRARY -- NIGHT

RADIO
Senator Percy has reason to celebrate the fact that both houses of the Mississippi Legislature have exonerated him of bribery charges. The revelation that the alleged bribery bills included some that had not been issued at the time of election, cemented the case. However, State Senator Bilbo continues to insist that his story is true, and there are signs that many believe him. Mr. Bilbo is drawing ever larger crowds across the state. His charge that Percy won his senate seat through a conspiracy hatched with fellow magnates over poker games and whiskey in houses of ill repute, seems to have captured the public’s imagination.
LEROY turns off the radio.

LEROY
What can we do about that man?

WALKER
Shoot him.

The three BROTHERS laugh. WILL and CRUMP exchange glances.

CRUMP
It’s interesting. Bilbo and Vardaman are changing tactics. It’s less white supremacy now, more--

More?

CRUMP
Regular folks versus aristocrats. They are playing the class card.

LEROY
How do we fight that?

CRUMP
It’s an image problem. People think you’re--English nobility or something.

WILLIE
We are!

WALKER
The family genealogist speaks.

CRUMP
Speak less loudly, please. Vardaman can be genteel, but he does not advertise that fact. He wants the redneck vote and knows how to get it.

WILL
It was a terrible idea. Electing senators with the popular vote. The whole idea was to elect the best and most able. People like Father.
Welcome to the modern world.

I’m liking it less and less.

What you have to start liking is voters.

A low-key display of agitation among the PERCYS.

INT. PERCY CAMPAIGN CAR -- DAY

May, 1911. LEROY, WILL, and CRUMP sit in the back seat. Car is moving through hilly countryside. Drizzle falls.

What’s the next stop, Mr. Crump?

A revival camp outside of Black Hawk. A rough crowd, I’m afraid.

Plenty of rough crowds in these hills.

Not to be alarming, but I heard that somebody might try to rotten-egg you.

WILL pulls a pistol from his waistband. LEROY gives him a faint, pensive smile.

I’ll use it. If I have to.

You’re looking at me the way you used to look at Mur, when she shoved the poker into the fire, in case of burglars. You look amused. And doubtful.

LEROY stares through his window at drizzle.

EXT. REVIVAL CAMP -- DAY

Two hundred roughly dressed REDNECKS mingle in a clearing in the woods before a crude wooden platform. WILL walks through the CROWD attracting venomous stares. He comes across a pair of unattended wicker hampers. His nose wrinkles. WILL glances around, then opens a hamper lid: DIRTY EGGS. WILL closes the hamper, pulls his gun, crosses his arms across his chest, the pistol dangling from a hand. A BYSTANDER watches.

BYSTANDER
What’s the problem, mister?

WILL
There is no problem.

LEROY mounts the stage. From the CROWD, a GUTTURAL HISS. LEROY’S eyes glint. The CROWD quiets.

LEROY sees WILL standing with pistol by the hampers. They nod at each other.

INT. PRIVATE CARD ROOM, TENNESEE CLUB, MEMPHIS -- NIGHT

June, 1911. WILLIE plays poker with FOUR FELLOW TYCOONS.

TYCOON # 1
You’d think it was Bilbo running for the senate, not Vardaman. Bilbo’s dominating Southern politics just running for lieutenant governor.

TYCOON # 2
I’ve never seen anything like it. It’s mob rule. Almost like Socialism.

TYCOON # 1
A dangerous trend. You can feel it walking down the street. A new arrogance among the white trash. They think they’re as good as we are!

TYCOONS snort, laugh.

WILLIE
It’s intolerable.

(pause)
Especially because of what it’s doing to my brother. Jeering him simply because he’s a gentleman.

TYCOON # 3
It affects us all. Bilbo is to blame.
(folds his hand of cards)
He must be killed.

A silence. TYCOONS exchange angry stares.

TYCOON # 3
Let’s draw straws. To decide which one of us will do it.

Grim nods around the table, with one dissenter, TYCOON # 4:
He shakes his head.

TYCOON # 3
We’ll find out his travel plans, which train he’s on. When the train enters a suitable county--where we run the court--Bilbo will, ah, misbehave. And one of us will shoot him.

TYCOON # 4
Gentlemen, with all due respect I must bow out of this particular adventure.
I have five children, a frail wife, and am moreover a terrible shot.
(smiles)
But I can help you out. I’ll prepare the straws.

INT. FRONT HALL OF A LARGE HOUSE -- NIGHT

The same night. WILLIE enters.

WILLIE
Caroline!

A beautiful, smartly dressed WOMAN, 20 years younger than WILLIE with an athletic spring in her step, enters the hall. WILLIE kisses her. A SMALL BOY, age six, enters.

WILLIE
Honey, we drew straws at the club tonight. To decide who goes on a mission.
CAROLINE
A mission.

WILLIE
Yes. And guess who won?
(to BOY)
Daddy’s going on a special train ride!

INT. MASTER BEDROOM -- DAY

Some days later. WILLIE polishes a pair of ornately engraved pistols. BOY enters, stares wide-eyed at the guns.

WILLIE
Don’t worry, Junior. It’s what we call a public service.

INT. WILLIE’S FRONT HALL -- DAY

Three days later. WILLIE enters. CAROLINE, JUNIOR rush in.

WILLIE
Some assassin I turned out to be. Bilbo didn’t get on the train!

INT. SMALL-TOWN HOTEL LOBBY -- NIGHT

July, 1911. LEROY, WILL, WALKER, CRUMP, and a YOUNG MAN [WALKER’S son ROY, age 21] enter the lobby, their faces grim. A CLERK looks up at them.

CLERK
Welcome to Lauderdale Springs, gentlemen.

WALKER
We have rooms booked under Percy.

CLERK
I knew that the moment I saw you.

INT. LEROY’S HOTEL ROOM -- NIGHT

The PERCYS and CRUMP confer in the cramped room.

WALKER
I’m still upset about this. Why are we dignifying Bilbo with a debate?

CRUMP
Because Vardaman won’t debate. And with Bilbo setting the agenda across the state, he has to be answered.

WALKER
He’s still making corruption charges!

LEROY
Which is why I must lay him low. Boys--let’s get some sleep.

INT. WILL’S HOTEL ROOM -- NIGHT

WILL lies on his bed, fully clothed, reading poetry.

A SHARP RAP on the door. WILL gets up, opens the door. WALKER barges in, seething.

WALKER
Willie’s not here, which means I must talk with you.

WILL Shoot.

WALKER laughs, a bit MANIACALLY.

WALKER
That’s exactly it. We have to shoot Bilbo. Kill him.

WILL
You’re serious.

WALKER
Oh, yes. Willie tried. He failed. So now it’s our turn.
(pulls out a pistol)
Tomorrow morning. At breakfast. He’s staying in this fleabag hotel.

WILL
All right. How--do we do it?
WALKER
The usual way. We make him reach for his gun.

WILL And Father?

WALKER
He’s the candidate so he stays out of it. It’s you, me, and Roy.

INT. WILL’S ROOM -- NIGHT

WILL, alone, looks into the mirror of the room’s armoire. With a lunging movement he grabs something from his waistband: a PISTOL: he trains it on himself in the mirror.

SOUND OF: A thwarted click.

WILL
Damn. The safety lock. The stupid safety lock!

INT. HOTEL HALLWAY -- DAY

Six o’clock in the morning. WILL and ROY pause outside of the door leading to the dining room.

WILL
Roy--isn’t this a little crazy?

ROY
It’s our honor. Isn’t it?

WILL
What if Bilbo kills all three of us?

ROY
Don’t worry. I’ll get him.

WILL
For the sake of the Percy line, you better.

INT. MODEST HOTEL DINING ROOM -- DAY
An undistinguished-looking MAN [BILBO] sits by himself, slurping oatmeal from a bowl. Only one other table is occupied, by a FAMILY of four.

WILL and ROY enter, stare at BILBO, sit a few yards away. BILBO glances at them, resumes slurping oatmeal.

WALKER swaggers into the dining room, his footfalls loud. He appraises the situation for a moment. WILL and ROY put hands near their waistbands. WALKER nods at them.

FATHER of the FAMILY having breakfast stares at WALKER, who exudes hostility and menace. A WAITER comes in, stares.

WALKER
(bellows)
Who is that coward I see sitting over there? I think I’ll KILL HIM!

BILBO continues to slurp: As if nothing had happened.

FATHER hustles FAMILY out of the room. WAITER ducks out.

WALKER
Bilbo, you coward! Defend yourself!

BILBO continues to slurp.

WALKER’S bravado deflates. Disgusted, he beckons WILL and ROY. They exit.

INT. TRAIN SPEEDING THROUGH COUNTRYSIDE -- DAY

Late July, 1911. LEROY, WILL, and CRUMP sit in a compartment. They look totally exhausted.

LEROY
We’ve done our best. Crisscrossed the state since March. God knows how many speeches, rallies. I’ve stared down killers with guns, seen sheriffs get stabbed by hecklers, I’ve even kissed babies... What more can I do?

CRUMP
A few more days of campaigning. And then it’s over.
LEROY
What are the chances?

WILL
There’s no chance, Father.

CRUMP
Don’t say that.

WILL
I’m often accused of living in an unreal world. Poetry, and so on. But this much I know: We are entering dark times. And that is the reality. The popularity of men like Vardaman and Bilbo could not be starker proof. Scoundrels are taking over. And why? Because our democracy allows it. A redneck’s vote is as good as yours or mine.

(pause)
Unfortunately, we’re outnumbered.

LEROY
Well. We tried. I thank both of you.

LEROY smiles at CRUMP, then at WILL.

WILL smiles back. He NOTICES SOMETHING:

EXT. GREENVILLE NEWSTAND -- DAY

The Greenville Democrat-Times is selling briskly. PEOPLE stand around grimly reading it, their hands clenched to the paper. The headline wobbles in the various grips:

VARDAMAN LANDSLIDE
BILBO GETS RECORD VOTE

TWO ELDERLY REDNECKS gleefully shuffle by. A GENTLEMAN buying a paper glares at them.

GENTLEMAN
What’s so funny?

ELDERLY REDNECK # 1 purses his lips, squirts tobacco juice to the pavement.

ELDERLY REDNECK # 1
Bottom rail’s on top! And with Bilbo, it’s gwiner stay that way.

INT. WILLIE AND CAROLINE’S DINING ROOM -- DAY

Late April, 1912. WILLIE, CAROLINE, WILLIE JR., and TWO YOUNGER CHILDREN (WALKER and LADY) eat breakfast. WILLIE looks a little under the weather.

CAROLINE
Maybe you should cancel the trip.

WILLIE
It’s an important case.

WILLIE JR.
Daddy, are you going to shoot the bad man again?

WILLIE
No, not this time. I should have done it the last time, Son.

Let’s not discuss it in front of the children.

WILLIE
They’re Percys. They should know what that means.

(winces)
Something’s wrong in my gut.

CAROLINE
Probably you just need to lose weight.

WILLIE Probably.

INT. PERCY FRONT HALL, GREENVILLE -- DAY
May, 1912. The phone rings. CAMILLE walks in, answers.

    CAMILLE
    Hello? Why hello, Caroline.

    CAROLINE (OC)
    Willie’s away on business and came down with something, we don’t know what, but it’s serious enough that he’s in a hospital. I’m going up there today.

    CAMILLE
    Oh, dear.

    CAROLINE (OC)
    Don’t worry, the doctors say it’s not serious. They just don’t know what it is yet. Willie probably just strained something because he’s so overweight.

    CAMILLE
    (smiles)
    Have a good trip. Give him our love.

INT. LEROY’S SENATE OFFICE -- DAY

May, 1912. A PRETTY SECRETARY sits in the reception area. Beyond an ajar door, a stately office, no one at the desk. The phone rings. SECRETARY answers.

    SECRETARY
    Senator Percy’s office.

    CAMILLE (OC)
    Charlotte, it’s Mrs. Percy. I must speak with him.

    CHARLOTTE
    Mrs. Percy, I’m sorry, he’s on the floor debating...

    CAMILLE (OC)
    Send someone to get him, please. Immediately.

INT. WILL’S OFFICE AT PERCY & PERCY -- DAY
WILL is on the phone.

WILL
He died?

CAMILLE (OC)
The doctors were so confused. Caroline should have taken him back to Memphis.

WILL
Father? Have you told Father?

CAMILLE (OC)
Charlotte is getting him from the floor right now, no--he doesn’t know. Will. Please call Walker.

INT. RECEPTION AREA OF BIG-TIME LAW OFFICE -- DAY

A SECRETARY answers a phone.

Walker Percy’s office.

WILL (OC)
This is Will Percy. I must speak with my uncle.

SECRETARY
He’s at home today, Mr. Percy. Do you have the number?

INT. ORNATE, GLOOMY STUDY -- DAY

On a desk, a phone rings. A PERSON lying on a couch stirs, groggily sits up. It’s WALKER, unshaven, disheveled, wearing a dressing gown.

WALKER staggers to the phone, answers.

WALKER
Yes?

WILL (OC)
Walker? It’s Will.
WALKER
Yes, what do you want?

WILL (OC)
Walker, are you all right?

WALKER
Yes--I’m--just... Actually, I’m having a rough day.

WILL (OC)
I’m sorry to hear that. Walker, I have bad news. Willie died.

WALKER
I don’t understand.

WILL (OC)
Willie passed away suddenly while on a business trip.

WALKER
I see. He died.

WALKER clutches his hair, emits a semi-deranged HOWL.

INT. EPISCOPAL CHURCH -- DAY

Church is packed. PERCY FAMILY sit in the front row. A BISHOP conducts a funeral service.

INT. WILLIE AND CAROLINE’S HOUSE -- DAY

Reception rooms are thronged with mourners following the funeral. WALKER and LEROY sit next to each other in a corner of the living room.

WALKER
You remember when the three of us went up to the Mayo Clinic?

LEROY nods.

WALKER
I was going through that rough patch. My nerves. You and Willie took me up there to see the mind doctors.
(grins)
But neither of you exactly trusted the idea of a mind doctor. So you decided to test them. There we were, the three of us seated before the experts in that first interview. And Willie asked them: “Can you tell just by looking at us which one is having problems?”

LEROY
The doctors guessed that it was me.

LEROY and WALKER share an intimate laugh. WILL approaches.

LEROY
(to WILL)
We’re remembering old times together.

WALKER
(quietly furious)
I blame Bilbo and Vardaman for this. It crippled Willie’s health. Out of the blue, he gets this—this peculiar disease.

WILL
I guess that Bilbo is evil enough to cause kidney failure. It’s as good an explanation as anything else.

WALKER stares blankly into space.

WILL
Where are the children?

LEROY
Upstairs.

INT. NURSERY -- DAY

A BLACK NURSE attends WILLIE JR. and his younger siblings WALKER and LADY. A knock. WILL enters. He nods at NURSE.

WILL
(to CHILDREN)
Hello.
CHILDREN

Hi.

WILL

Willie, let’s talk a minute.

WILL leads WILLIE to the other side of the room, sits him down, seats himself.

WILL

Willie--what do you want to be when you grow up?

WILLIE JR.

(dazedly)

I don’t know.

WILL

Well, that’s fine. You have plenty of time to decide.

(smiles)

I’ll tell you this, though. As a Percy, you have a responsibility.

WILLIE JR.

I do?

WILL

Yes, indeed. You must carry on the Percy line.

ACT III

INT. GREENVILLE TRAIN STATION -- DAY

June, 1914. WILL, AGE 29, and CARRIE STERN stand on the platform. A train HISSES.

CARRIE

You make your escape. How I envy you!

WILL

Dog-bite cases. Mule thievery. And Mother and Father. It's not escape. It’s survival.

CARRIE
Send me a postcard from Taormina.

EXT. HORSE-DRAWN OPEN CARRIAGE -- DAY

Summer, 1914. WILL and an ENGLISH GENTLEMAN ride in the carriage up a winding dirt road on the outskirts of Taormina, Sicily.

WILL

Norman, what is he the Baron of?

NORMAN

A minor noble family, of Mecklenberg. But plenty of cash.

The carriage passes through an ornate iron gateway. A large villa looms ahead.

INT. VILLA ENTRY -- DAY

WILL and NORMAN enter the villa. A party is in progress. Eccentric EUROPEAN GENTLEMEN of varying ages chat, drink, argue, laugh. NORMAN leads WILL to a STOUT MAN, about 60, who effusively greets NORMAN.

STOUT MAN

Ah! My dear Norman Douglas!

DOUGLAS

I present to you William Percy of Mississippi, a rather drab slab of the American South but not without its charms, which include remnants of antebellum grandeur, whence William hails—or at least he so claims. William, please meet Baron Wilhelm von Glöeden. Willy—meet Will!

WILL

Most pleased to meet you.

DOUGLAS

Will suggests that he descends from the Percys of Northumbria...

WILL

Family lore, from my Uncle Willie. I must say, I just love your photographs.

GLÖEDEN
Well then. After we have supplied you with drink, you must see the terrace.

GLÖEDEN waves at a row of open French doors, plucks two glasses of Champagne from the tray of a HANDSOME YOUNG WAITER.

Glasses in hand, WILL and DOUGLAS go out to an expansive terrace. In the center a vine-bedecked rectangular colonnade encloses a large swimming pool. Beyond the colonnade the Mediterranean distantly sparkles. Mt. Etna rears into the sky.

Between pillars, life-size classical statues of garlanded nude youths decorate the colonnade. One of them MOVES SLIGHTLY.

DOUGLAS
Better than the photos, eh, old boy?

WILL
Most charming. Fascinating!

DOUGLAS
Old Krupp would have loved this party. A shame, that a Marxist journalist--that von Harden creature--could drive him to suicide. Time was, the masses had no inkling of our ways. The upper classes had nothing to fear.

WILL
(surveys party, grins)
This looks fairly fearless to me.

DOUGLAS
Here we’re safe, mainly because the boys and their families need the money. No one complains. But in the Protestant countries...

WILL
Everyone complains. The feminists, the moral purity types, the socialists, all the meddling do-gooders. I know. It started with the La Bouchere Amendment in England, I suppose, outlawing child prostitution. Dear old Oscar Wilde became the first victim.

DOUGLAS
And then George Woodberry got the boot from Columbia in New York. The best Uranian poet since Whitman. He fled here to Italy, of course.

(raises Champagne glass)
To George and Krupp!

WILL
(raises glass)
To Oscar!

They clink glasses, drink.

EXT. TERRACE -- NIGHT

Torches cast shadowy light across the terrace. Around the pool INEBRIATED GUESTS chat up GARLANDED YOUTHS, now released from statue duty. An ELDERLY GENTLEMAN chases a SHRIEKING BOY, who jumps in the pool. GENTLEMAN follows. Beyond the colonnade, on lawn, INDISTINCT BODIES fondle in murk. WILL and DOUGLAS watch.

WILL
This is a bit much.

DOUGLAS
Oh, come on!

WILL
Bear with me. I am not used to this sort of thing. Where I come from we call it rutting.

DOUGLAS
Rutting? How marvelous.

WILL stares at a SLENDER BOY sitting by the edge of the pool, his feet in the water. On either side TWO GUESTS vie for his attention. BOY is indifferent, sullen.
DOUGLAS
That's Vittorio. The beauty of the bunch and he knows it. He actually speaks some English. His grandfather died fighting for Garibaldi. The family, alas--fell on hard times.

WILL
Will you introduce me?

EXT. MARBLE BENCH -- NIGHT

WILL and VITTORIO sit on the bench savoring a view of the moonlit Mediterranean. The party distantly echoes.

WILL
The wine-dark sea.

VITTORIO
Ah. Homer.

WILL
(laughs)
What are you doing here?

VITTORIO
I am poor.

WILL
I'm climbing the mountain tomorrow.
Will you join me?

VITTORIO
No. But you can kiss me.
(pause)
For two dollars.

WILL plunges his face into his hands. VITTORIO stands.

VITTORIO
Good-bye Will Percy from Mississippi.

WILL watches VITTORIO strut back to the party, buttocks silvered in the moonlight.

EXT. DUSTY CAFÉ -- DAY
WILL sits at a table with NORMAN DOUGLAS, drinking coffee. A horse-drawn carriage stands in the street.

DOUGLAS
The problem with you is, you want love.

WILL nods.

DOUGLAS
There is no love! Not for the likes of us.

WILL
Von Glöeden has devotees.

DOUGLAS
Money! Can't you get that through your head? It's paid for.

WILL Must it be?

DOUGLAS
Well then, find a rich boy to love you. Good luck.

WILL
I once loved a rich boy named Bixby. But. He got married.

DOUGLAS
You see. That's what happens.

WILL broods.

WILL
You won’t climb the mountain with me.

DOUGLAS
Are you mad? What is this quest you have, with that ridiculous volcano?

WILL
The sunrise from the summit. Baedeker gives it two stars.

DOUGLAS
What a dutiful tourist you are.
WILL goes to the carriage, gets in, waves sourly to DOUGLAS.

INT. PERCY PARLOR -- NIGHT

Late September, 1914. WILL, LEROY and CAMILLE sip drinks.

WILL

All told, it was a wonderful trip.

(lights a cigarette)

But I had an eerie moment on Mt. Etna.

CAMILLE

Eerie?

WILL

On the way up the donkey-boys--mind you, age 60--got very drunk. I asked the guide why. He said they were scared because this was the first ascent since the most recent eruption. And then he said--who do you suppose had made last ascent before that eruption?

LEROY and CAMILLE raise eyebrows.

WILL

An Austrian grand duke, the guide said. Now, I wasn't all that interested in dukes. The goal was to see the famed sunrise, and the crater Empedocles tumbled into. But the guide added that this duke had just been assassinated. Two days before. In Sarajevo.

LEROY

Franz Ferdinand.

WILL

At the time I didn't know that it meant--war.

(pause)

I want to serve.

LEROY

Serve? We haven't declared war.
WILL

Not yet.

CAMILLE

You mean--you want to fight?

WILL

(nods)

I can't fight until we declare. But Herbert Hoover needs volunteers for his food-relief program. That would give me a good look at the situation. And then, when we declare, I'll return for officer's training.

LEROY

(frowns)

You don't weigh enough to qualify, Will.

WILL

Not now. But I'll fix that!

LEROY and CAMILLE exchange puzzled glances.

INT. HERBERT HOOVER’S BELGIAN HEADQUARTERS -- DAY

February, 1917. WILL sits at a desk in an office, speaking into a phone. The office is crowded with fellow food-relief volunteers at desks.

WILL

Non, monsieur, vous ne comprenez pas, je suis Americain, pas Allemagne, et notre office, de Herbert Hoover, nous avons des alimentations divers pour les pauvres...

A MESSENGER BOY rushes to WILL’S desk with an envelope.

WILL

(into phone)

Pardonnez moi.

WILL takes the envelope. It’s a sealed telegram. He tears it open, STARES. An adjacent OFFICEMATE looks on.
OFFICEMATE
Bad news?

WILL
My Uncle Walker... He died.
(into phone)
Nous parlerons demain. Merci.

WILL hangs up.

OFFICEMATE
Sorry to hear it. Well, you’ll be going home soon.

WILL
(dazedly)
How do you figure that?

OFFICEMATE
When we declare war. In a month or two. You’ll have to go home to enlist. Officers school--right?

Right. Right.

EXT. PERCY GARDEN -- DAY

May, 1917. WILL and LEROY sit at the garden table.

WILL
Why did he do it?

LEROY
What's the medical term? Melancholia? Depression?

WILL
I don't think that quite explains...

LEROY
Why a man in the prime of life takes a shotgun to himself?
(pause)
Your mother thinks that Willie’s death depressed him. And that the election loss depressed him. The truth of the matter is that Walker had a long history of depression. You know the Mayo Clinic story?

WILL nods.

LEROY
It runs in the family, Will. Madness. Mania. Suicide. The “crouching beast,” we call it. It’s almost like a curse.

(smiles faintly)
Think of Cousin Kate. She had a mania. My uncle LeRoy Pope went crazy. My great-grand-father went crazy. Hopped in that creek for no good reason. An iron kettle tied to his chest, to sink him. And he did sink.

WILL
This conversation is taking a--

LEROY
Morbid turn? I’m trying to explain why your mother and I want grandchildren. It’s a question of--well, of beating the odds, I suppose you could say.

WILL
We have Willie’s two boys, and Walker’s son Roy, who has two baby boys. How’s Roy doing?

LEROY
I believe that he and Mattie Sue are holding up pretty well.

(sighs)
You know why I bring all of this up.

WILL
You think I’m unsuited to go to war.

LEROY
Camille and I don’t want to lose you. We’ve already lost so much.

WILL
I think you’re just jealous.

They stare at each other.

LEROY
Right. I never got to fight in a war. And so I’m jealous.
(lights a cigar)
To get into officers school you have to pass a physical exam. To pass the exam you have to meet a minimum weight. To be frank about it, Son, you’re too skinny.

WILL
I have a secret plan. It involves quarts of cream and seven meals a day.

LEROY smiles.

WILL
I might be crazy, just as crazy as all the Percy nutcases, but I intend to fight in this war. And I will.

EXT. WOODED FRENCH COUNTRYSIDE -- NIGHT

Late September, 1918. SOUNDS OF: EXPLOSIONS, BOTH DISTANT AND NEARBY.

In lieutenant's uniform, WILL, age 33, walks alone down a narrow road, passing assorted AMERICAN SOLDIERS, war matériel.

ARTILLERY SHELLS EXPLODE ALONG THE ROAD. SOLDIERS FALL, SPEWING GORE.

WILL continues walking: EERILY UNFAZED.

WILL comes to an open area devoid of shelter.

Ahead, the CREST OF A HILLTOP.

AMERICAN SOLDIERS suddenly SWARM FROM HILLTOP, in retreat. A COLONEL tries to reorganize them.

WILL rushes forward, oblivious to ENEMY FIRE WHIZZING BY.
WILL
(to SOLDIERS)
We must hold this hill! Get down and fire!

WILL and SOLDIERS drop to stomachs, RETURN FIRE.

From a distance, COLONEL admiringly observes.

INT. HOTEL BALLROOM -- NIGHT

Early December, 1918. Amid a FESTIVE CROWD sprinkled with MEN IN UNIFORM, WILL chats with a FELLOW VETERAN, who sports the Distinguished Service Cross. A coterie of attractive YOUNG WOMEN ogle them from fifteen feet away.

FELLOW VETERAN
When I left this town, people thought I was a good-for-nothing drunk. Now I'm a he-man hunk.

WILL
(laughs)
Wish I could say the same, Gervys.

GERVYS
Hell, you've got those medals. You walked through enemy fire like it was harmless as—-as confetti!

WILL
I just pretended that it wasn't real.

GERVYS
That's a nice trick, pretending that bullets and blood and guts aren't real. (smiles)
It is true that a lot of folks don't know what to think of you.

WILL
What do you mean?

GERVYS
Usually it's the artist types that don't make it. You know. Poets die---nobly.

WILL
Oh, so I'm a disappointment. I let down the town!

They laugh. LEROY approaches, his eyes twinkling.

LEROY
You boys have some admirers.

GERVYS grins at the YOUNG WOMEN, who flirtatiously smile back. GERVYS walks over to them.

LEROY
You're a hero, Son. Go for it.

WILL
Those girls aren't good enough, Father. They don't come close to Mother, or to Mur. You know that.

The twinkle dies in LEROY's eyes.

INT. PERCY PARLOR -- NIGHT
Early December, 1920. LEROY, CAMILLE, WILL, JOHN PARKER, and PARKER’S WIFE take glasses of Champagne from a BUTLER’S tray. LEROY raises his glass to PARKER.

LEROY
To the governor-elect of Louisiana!

All toast PARKER.

PARKER
Thank you, thank you. I must confess, I’m a little surprised.

LEROY
Surprised? Why?

PARKER
The same element that took away your senate seat almost defeated me. Call it the Bilbo vote.

WILL and LEROY flinch slightly.

LEROY
Almost, maybe. But you prevailed.

PARKER
Yes, and naturally I’m proud of it. But I tell you, LeRoy--there’s something new in politics these days. We saw the beginnings of it back in 1911 when you faced Vardaman with Bilbo as his pit bull. As I campaigned last summer and through the fall I really began to feel it.

(pause)
Camille, tell me something--do you sense a growing animosity toward Catholics?

CAMILLE
My goodness, John. What makes you ask?
(to PARKER’S WIFE)
Cecille--what on earth could your dear husband mean?

CECILLE
Perhaps now is not the time to...
LEROY
Well of course now is the time. You and Camille were both raised Catholic, Cecille. If John can pose that question to Camille, then surely it must be of concern to you--and to all of us. Are people muttering about the pope down in New Orleans?

PARKER
In Atlanta, LeRoy. And it is spreading across the South.

LEROY
You don’t mean that bastard thing that calls itself the Klan?
    (stares at PARKER)
That is what you mean.
    (sips Champagne)
Camille, if I may reply to John on your behalf. The answer is no. Here in Greenville, in Washington County, there is not a trace of the Ku Klux Klan and not a trace of bigotry against the Catholic Church. And there never will be. My father kept the Klan away from these parts after the War--and that was the real Klan, not impostors in Atlanta. We certainly won’t allow them to make any trouble now.

PARKER
But you do see how the Klan is attractive to the Bilbo element. And you can’t deny that that element is a force.

LEROY
At the moment I just want to savor the fact that my friend from boyhood will soon be taking charge of the great state of Louisiana.
    (to BUTLER)
More Champagne!

INT. STYLISH APARTMENT, NEW YORK CITY -- NIGHT
Late December, 1920. The Manhattan skyline shimmers beyond windows. WILL sits with HUGER JERVEY. They sip martinis. A phonograph plays opera.

HUGER
Do you anticipate the new year?

WILL
I suppose. As long as I can get away from Greenville on a regular basis.

HUGER
You’ve never had any problem with that.

(pause)

I’m worried, Will. There’s an ugly new mood in the country. I’m afraid it will do harm to our kind.

WILL
We’ve never been entirely safe.

HUGER
Yes. But there is this new--it’s almost like a masculinity crisis.

WILL laughs.

HUGER
I’m serious. You see it in all the talk about immigrants from the backwaters of Europe. They’re “effeminate, womanish.” They corrode Anglo-Saxon virility. Even quite well-educated people bemoan what they see as the extinction of colonial bloodlines. “Race suicide,” all that, with the influx of barbarian blood.

WILL
But what does it have to do with us?

HUGER
Fear of degeneracy is on the rise. If upper-class intellectuals like Madison Grant and those Brahmins up in Boston are practically having nervous break-downs over the state of American man- hood, what do they think of queers?
YOUNG WILL PERCY. WAP & LG. 8/08/07

WILL
(nods)
Not much. Roosevelt ordered the crack-down on the queens that were picking up sailors in Newport. That kind of thing hadn’t happened before.

HUGER
They arrested an Episcopal priest, three patres familias, and two blokes from Bailey’s Beach. Of course, the cops had to call it off after the trials exposed their methods--using teenage boys to entrap the victims. But not in time to stop it from spreading to Harvard. Lowell expelled two kids. The one whose father is a congressman committed suicide!

WILL
Maybe it’s the increased visibility. All the veterans home from the war, bringing with them a taste for taboo sex, newly aware that there are thousands of others like them.

(pause)
Yes, I agree. The hunt for so-called degenerates is on. It’s one reason the new Ku Klux Klan has grown so fast. Father isn’t concerned about Green-ville. But I wonder.

INT. PERCY LAW OFFICE -- DAY

February, 1922. WILL sits at his desk, working. A MAN enters.

WILL Hello, Jimmy.

JIMMY
Have you ever heard of someone named Colonel Joe Camp?

WILL No.
JIMMY
He recruits for the Ku Klux Klan.

WILL
A Klan colonel. So he’s not a real colonel. Why would I ever have heard of him?

JIMMY
He’s coming here in two weeks, and he’s booked the courthouse.

WILL leaps to his feet.

WILL What?

JIMMY nods. He hands WILL a flier.

JIMMY
Fliers went up today, all over town.

WILL charges out of his office and into LEROY’S. JIMMY follows. LEROY looks up.

WILL
The Klan is coming to town. Jimmy says that they have booked the courthouse.

LEROY (incredulous)
That’s not possible.

JIMMY hands LEROY a flier.

JIMMY
It says it right there. March 1, at the courthouse. Colonel Camp will welcome new recruits to the Klan. Ten bucks buys a membership.

LEROY (to WILL)
Who the hell authorized the courthouse?

WILL shrugs.
LEROY
My God, it’s somebody we know! Somebody we know in county government is working for the Klan! Who could it be?

LEROY picks up his phone.

LEROY
I’m going to stop this right now.

WILL Wait.

LEROY hangs up the phone.

WILL
Let’s find out more. We don’t know how organized they are.

JIMMY
It’s the “invisible” empire. Secret. The town could be riddled with the bastards.

LEROY glares into space.

LEROY
I guess I owe John Parker an apology.
    (he thinks)
You’re right. We have to flush them out, see who they are. And then go after them with everything we’ve got.

INT. GREENVILLE COURTHOUSE -- NIGHT

March 1, 1922. The courtroom is packed with TENSE WHITE MEN, many of them conspicuously armed. A TALL MAN wearing a white Stetson hat talks to a knot of SURLY REDNECKS just below the dais. A BUZZ of many heated conversations fills the large room.

LEROY enters with WILL and the county SHERIFF. The BUZZ quiets somewhat. LEROY and SHERIFF mount the dais.

LEROY
I propose that Sheriff Nicholson chair this meeting. Are there any objections?

The CROWD RUMBLES. SHERIFF takes that as an endorsement. He sits in the judge’s chair. LEROY remains standing by the dais. WILL finds a seat further back.

SHERIFF
Colonel Camp has come to address the citizens of Washington County. Colonel, you may proceed.

TALL MAN with Stetson mounts the dais.

CAMP
(boom voice)
Countrymen, I come bearing terrible news. There is a conspiracy afoot in the highest places to deny you your God-given liberties and rights. It is a conspiracy that originates in Rome and penetrates all corridors of power, in Washington, D.C., in New Orleans, in Memphis, and right here, I tell you, in the fine community of Greenville!

CLOSE ON: WILL. His lips curl.

CAMP
Let me remind you of certain facts, deadly facts! Who killed President Gar- field? An agent of Rome, a Catholic! Who killed President McKinley? Another Papist assassin! Are you aware that his Satanic majesty the Pope recently pur- chased large parcels of land from which to attack West Point and Washington? If you did not know that, you now do. Are you aware that nuns in convents sell their flesh to damn the weak to hell? They do!

CROWD stirs. A number of MUFFLED OATHS.

CAMP
Now let me point out more facts. Who is organized in this country? Catho- lics! And the Jews! Even the niggers are organized! So let me then ask, who is not organized? I’ll tell you. Real Americans, true Americans, are not organized! And I am here to change that sad state of affairs! Before it’s too late! Before the Pope attacks!

A smattering of applause. LEROY frowns.

EXT. COURTHOUSE -- NIGHT

A DEPUTY SHERIFF stands guard on the steps, listening to echoes of CAMP’S tirade. He reaches into his open collar, extracts a crucifix on a chain. He kisses it.

INT. COURTHOUSE -- NIGHT

Half an hour later. CAMP winds up his address.

CAMP
I close with an observation, my friends. The sacred order to which I belong, and which I hope and expect many of you will join, is a watchful order. We are everywhere, and we watch, and we take note. And what do we see? We see sin! We see drinking, gambling, whoring! Sinners beware! We know your wicked ways!

(pause)

Thank you.

Light applause.

MAN IN CROWD
Percy! Percy!

SEVERAL MEN IN CROWD
Percy! Percy!

Calls for LEROY to speak become a LOUD CHANT.

LEROY mounts the dais.

LEROY
(to CAMP)
I will answer your.
There’s no need for that.

PERCY! PERCY!

The Senator will speak.

After the War, in a time of great distress, the Ku Klux Klan served an honorable purpose in parts of the South. This new Klan--this so-called Klan--what purpose does it serve? I understand that to join, one pays ten dollars for that dubious privilege. And I understand that upon joining, members are expected to purchase all manner of robes, trinkets, toys. Into whose pockets does this money go? We hear of a feud between factions in Atlanta over that money. What is their real purpose? They are swindlers who want your money!

And now these swindlers propose to grace the streets of Greenville with hooded, robed parades. What is their purpose? To strike fear into our hearts! Who will be most afraid? Our Negroes, our Catholics, our Jews. Why should these fine people be afraid?

Protestant, Catholic and Jewish taxpayers paid for this fine courthouse in which we meet. Is this building therefore tainted? I have a Jewish business partner, lending money at six percent. Should we fear so generous a rate? The police force of this town includes a Catholic officer. Is the Pope creeping up on us?

LAUGHTER.

LEROY
I believe I heard the Colonel—he calls himself a colonel, of what army I know not—say that the Klan protects Southern womanhood. Since when has Southern womanhood needed protection from men in masks?

LAUGHTER, APPLAUSE. CAMP winces.

LEROY
Do we want Greenville to waste away for the lack of labor in our fields, as colored folks flee to escape the robes?

CROWD HISSES.

LEROY
My fellow citizens, this colonel here, this fraud, he warns us that his people have secret spies watching our daily lives, prying into our private affairs. In the United States of America do we want snoops to tell us how to behave?

PEOPLE IN CROWD
No! No!

CROWD IGNITES WITH ANGER. CAMP takes a step backward.

LEROY
Do we want crooks in Atlanta dictating our future?

CROWD SURGES TOWARD DAIS, fists in the air. CAMP pales. SHERIFF bangs gavel.

CAMP
(to SHERIFF)
I believe—I believe I’ll return to my hotel.

SHERIFF
That’s fine with me.
CAMP
And I will need protection.

SHERIFF
(shouts)
Get Boots! He’s out front!

DEPUTY SHERIFF BOOTS wades through the crowd.

SHERIFF
(to CAMP, loudly)
Deputy Boots will escort you. But be aware--Boots is an agent of Rome!

WILD, VIOLENT LAUGHTER.

LEROY surveys the scene with grim satisfaction.

WILL stands.

WILL
I propose a resolution denouncing the Ku Klux Klan!

SHERIFF
Is it the sense of this meeting that we denounce the Klan?

CROWD
YES!

SHERIFF
The Klan is hereby denounced!

BOOTS leads away a cringing CAMP.

INT. PERCY PARLOR -- NIGHT

Later that night. LEROY, WILL, CAMILLE drink coffee.

WILL
Father, I predict that your speech will come to be seen as historic.

LEROY
Somebody had to say those things. I guess I’m glad it was me.
(smiles at CAMILLE)
I must defend my petite Papiste.

INT. PERCY LAW OFFICE -- DAY

Several days later. WILL works at his desk. His phone rings. He answers.

    WILL
    Percy and Percy.

WILL listens.

    WILL
    Yes, sir. Please hold the line.

WILL walks into LEROY’S office.

    WILL
    The editor of the Atlantic Monthly is on the phone. He wants to publish your speech!

LEROY picks up his phone.

INT. PERCY DINING ROOM -- NIGHT

Some days later. LEROY, CAMILLE, WILL dine.

    CAMILLE
    Cecille Parker telephoned today. She said that John is impressed, LeRoy. The speech is “the talk of the South.”

    WILL
    I wonder if the Governor has gotten to the bottom of those disappearances in Morehouse Parish. I’ve been hearing rumors the Klan did it. Maybe in reaction to the speech.

    LEROY
    The boys who disappeared are from good families, openly contemptuous of the Klan. I’m sure it’s connected.

    WILL
I wonder if we should be worried.

LEROY
No. We’re safe in Greenville.

EXT. PERCY HOUSE -- NIGHT

Several days later. It’s pouring rain. A BURLY MAN wearing a soft-brim black hat knocks on the front door.

WILL opens the door, studies MAN: unshaven, shifty eyes.

WILL Yes?

MAN
My name’s Rick Keith, I’m from Arcola.

LEROY comes to the door.

LEROY
What can we do for you?

KEITH
I ran out of gas a few miles out of town, and had to leave my sister in the car. I’m looking for an open service station. Can you help me?

LEROY
Of course. But you’ll have to drive my car. I don’t know how.

KEITH
Sure, I’ll drive it.

LEROY
Let me get my coat.

WILL eyes KEITH with suspicion.

THREE GENTLEMEN approach the house.

WILL
(to KEITH)
My father’s bridge partners.
KEITH averts his eyes. One of the BRIDGE PARTNERS is SHERIFF NICHOLSON. He walks up, eyes KEITH.

WILL Hello, Sheriff.

SHERIFF
Hey there, Will. What’s up?

WILL
Mr. Keith from Arcola ran out of gas.

SHERIFF
Mr. Keith? I don’t know any Keiths in Arcola.

KEITH
Excuse me.

KEITH strides off into the night.

SHERIFF
Hey! Hey, you! You come back here!

KEITH breaks into a run, disappears.

SHERIFF
I’ll be damned.

WILL
Thank God you showed up. Father was about to drive off with him.

SHERIFF
Ever the good Samaritan. Well, he’ll have to be more careful.

WILL
You got that right.

INT. GREENVILLE TRAIN STATION -- DAY

September, 1923. A sweltering afternoon. WILL stands on the platform, watching a train come in.
WILLIE JR., age 16 (UNCLE WILLIE’S eldest child), steps off the train with suitcases. He’s handsome, lithe, self-confident, with a certain hunger in his eyes.

WILL

Hey there, Willie!

WILLIE gives his first cousin a dazzling smile.

WILL

How was the trip?

WILLIE

Smashing, especially going over the Rockies.

(laughs)
The scenery got tamer after that.

They walk out to the waiting Percy car. WILLIE nods at the BLACK CHAUFFEUR. He and WILL get in. Car moves off.

INT. PERCY CAR -- DAY

WILL

The Peabody’s the same as ever?

WILLIE

Just the same, with ducks waddling from the elevator to the fountain. The roof deck got cool by ten and the band was great. The waiters all remembered Fa Fa and Munnie, and Willis got me the very best bourbon. I didn’t take the high-yellow girl he showed me. But she was a knockout.

WILL

What about Alonzo?

WILLIE

Well, he’s so much older and so dignified and stately. As headwaiter he doesn’t have time for teenagers like me. But he obviously taught Willis how to serve a Percy.

Car pulls into the Percy drive. WILL and WILLIE get out.
WILLIE
(to CHAUFFEUR)
You drive well enough to get around L.A.’s crazy traffic.

CHAUFFEUR
(delighted)
Thanks, Mista Willie. I ain’t got out there yet but Mista Will says weez gwoin West one of these days. One time I drove the Senatah to Washington and New York. All the time to Memphis and New Orleans, a course. You been there?

WILLIE
No, but I can’t wait.

CHAUFFEUR
Mista Will and the Senatah--they’ll show you the sights.

INT. PERCY LIBRARY – DAY

Same day, minutes later. WILLIE enters, WILL follows. LEROY rises to shake WILLIE’S hand.

LEROY
Last time I saw you, you were still in knickers.

WILLIE
Yes, that was in 1916 when Munnie was taking us to California. We stopped in Memphis so that you could become our guardian.

LEROY
Well, you’ve certainly grown up and I guess that Lady and Walker have too. You’re all three just two years apart.

WILLIE
Lady has become a flapper! You know that Munnie and Aunt Wilma took her all over Europe. She celebrated her fourteenth birthday at Lake Como. Then she totaled the Pierce Arrow Munnie gave her for her fifteenth birthday. So they sent her to study at a kind of prison run by nuns, Marymount, just outside of Paris. They are determined to get her straightened out and suitably married.

WILL
I hope she enjoys Paris as much as I did.

WILLIE
(laughs)
In L.A., J. Paul Getty used to stop by the country club across the street from our house, to pick up fourteen-year-old girls. Lady ignored him. She’s never yet had a boyfriend, cuts her hair short, and swims like a fish!

LEROY
What are your plans, Willie?

WILLIE
Stanford. I got to know it when I was Prepping at Menlo Park last year. You know it recruits many of the older professors from Harvard who at the peaks of their careers get sick of the long, cold New England winters.

WILL
Well do I remember them, and how cold and formal the Yankees themselves are.

INT. PERCY DINING ROOM – NIGHT

The same day. A BLACK BUTLER serves dinner to LEROY, WILL, CAMILLE, and WILLIE.

CAMILLE
(to WILLIE)
Your mother certainly took the three of you on a grand journey after your father died. Virgina Beach, St. Augustine. And Riverside Drive in New York.
LEROY
I’m glad that she’s finally settled down in Los Angeles. It’s a wonderful place to make a new start. People are so much less judgmental. A far cry from Memphis, of course.

WILLIE
We were in different schools every year. I got pretty tired of that.

(pause)
I guess that Munnie--it was like she was running away from something.

(bats eyelashes)
What was it?

ELDER PERCYS exchange glances. WILL coughs.

LEROY
You have a right to ask that question.

(clears his throat)
Some people in Memphis--didn’t approve of your mother. For silly reasons, of course.

WILLIE “Silly”?

CAMILLE
Well, you see, Caroline was so much younger than your father.

WILLIE
Oh. That must be it.

LEROY
(expansively)
The important thing is that she has found a home. And that you are here to finish up high school--and get to know your kin. I know your mother feels that that’s part of your education.

(smiles paternalistically)
You were only six when Willie died. We have some catching up to do. You are, after all, a Percy.
WILLIE looks at WILL.

    WILL
    After Daddy’s funeral, you sat me down and told me some things.

    WILL
    That’s right. I did.

    WILLIE
    You told me that as a Percy, I have a duty to continue the family line.

A moment of silence. WILL dabs his mouth with his napkin.

    WILL
    Yes. Yes, I did say that.

LEROY and CAMILLE shift in their chairs.

    WILLIE
    I just want to say, I’ve never forgotten it. And for that very reason, I am so grateful to be here.

WILLIE smiles angelically.

    LEROY
    Well!
    (gulps wine)
    I think you’ll find that Greenville
High is fairly different from the Menlo Park school. Greenville is still just a river port, not like L.A., but if you can survive the heat and humidity, the school here is very good. There’s splendid hunting and fishing. And of course, plenty of Southern belles!

CAMILLE and LEROY chuckle. WILL gives WILLIE an appraising gaze.

EXT. GREENVILLE COUNTRY CLUB POOL -- DAY

The next day. WILL and WILLIE lie on chaises longues, wearing swimsuits. WILL looks at WILLIE. He quickly looks away, wincing slightly. He cannot allow himself to stare at WILLIE’S superbly fit late-adolescent physique.

WILLIE
We have another cousin. I think his name is Roy?

WILL
Yes. Of the Gray Eagle’s scions, in our generation it’s you, me, and Roy.

WILLIE
And my brother Walker.

WILL
Oh! Yes, of course.

WILLIE
Roy’s father killed himself.

WILL watches YOUNG PEOPLE frolic in the pool.

WILL
Yes, he did. A tragedy.

WILLIE
Why did he do it?

WILL rubs his face with both palms.

WILL
Who knows?
(turns to look WILLIE in the eye)
You’ve heard about the curse?

WILLIE
The “curse”! I like that!
laughs
There isn’t really a curse.
(pause)
Anyway, how is Roy doing?

WILL tears his gaze away from WILLIE.

WILL
Well, you’ll meet him soon enough, he and Father love to hunt together, and Roy is a ferocious golfer. He went to Lawrenceville, Princeton, Harvard Law. He’s quite the Percy princeling. In Birmingham Roy has a law practice that rivals his father’s.

WILLIE

He has children?

WILL

WILLIE

So many Walkers. So many LeRoys. And Williams.

WILL

It almost sounds like you’re sizing up the competition, Willie.

WILLIE

Really? I’m just trying to catch up. Not size up.

WILLIE turns on his side to face WILL, a hand propping his head. WILL cannot avoid a glimpse of WILLIE’S crotch.

WILLIE

So what is this about a curse?

WILL

It seems that just about every generation, a Percy male goes crazy and kills himself. And any number of Percy women have also lost their minds. (smiles tightly) What do you think about that, Willie?

WILLIE

Well. In our generation, which will it be? Roy, you, my brother—or me?

WILL

You’re awfully nonchalant about our family curse.

WILLIE
Maybe because I’ve got more important things to be excited about.

WILL

Such as?

WILLIE

I think girls are much more important. Don’t you?

A silence.

WILL

My. You are precocious.

WILLIE gives WILL a delighted smile.

EXT. PERCY GARDEN -- DAY

Later, the same day. A HANDSOME BLACK YOUTH weeds a flower bed. WILLIE strolls through the garden.

WILLIE

Hello there!

BLACK YOUTH

Hello, Mistah Willie.

WILLIE

Gosh, you know my name. What’s yours?

BLACK YOUTH

Ernest!

WILLIE looks ERNEST over.

WILLIE

Nice to meet you, Ernest.

ERNEST

Thanks, Mistah Willie.

INT. HIGH SCHOOL GYMNASIUM -- NIGHT

A few days later. The gym, decorated for a dance, is full of festively mingling STUDENTS. Several TEACHERS chaperone.
WILLIE, sharply dressed in jacket and tie, sits on a bleacher sipping a soda. An ATTRACTIVE GIRL approaches him.

GIRL
You must be Willie Percy.

WILLIE laughs.

WILLIE
How come everybody knows who I am?

GIRL
News travels fast in Greenville. Especially when it concerns the Percys. (smiles)
I’m Phoebe Paxton.

WILLIE
A pleasure to meet you, Phoebe.

PHOEBE
What’s it like to be the new kid in town?

PHOEBE sits next to WILLIE.

WILLIE
I’m used to it. Believe me. Except that here, I don’t have to introduce myself. Which is--interesting.

PHOEBE
How do you like it here?

WILLIE
It’s a little less--how to put it?--cosmopolitan than Los Angeles.

PHOEBE
Ooooh! You lived in Los Angeles?

WILLIE
Yep. Movies stars and everything. Hey, I have an idea. You want to go outside and have some fun? (whispers seductively) I’ve got a flask. And a joint.
EXT. GYM -- NIGHT

WILLIE and PHOEBE sit on a bench behind a copse of trees, PHOEBE helpless with laughter.

PHOEBE
That’s the funniest thing I ever heard!

WILLIE
L.A. can be a pretty strange place.

WILLIE takes a swig from a flask, offers flask to PHOEBE. She shakes her head.

PHOEBE
You’re not at all like your cousin Will.

WILLIE
Why should I be?

PHOEBE
Well, you’re a Percy--and so smart. But Will--he’s never really dated a girl.

WILLIE
Some guys don’t. You’d be surprised.

PHOEBE
Surprised by what?

WILLIE
How many faggots there are. L.A. is crawling with them.

PHOEBE
Do they--make moves on you?

WILLIE
(laughs)

All the time!

PHOEBE
Does that bother you?
WILLIE
Not really. It gets me free drinks.

PHOEBE
I see. Well, you must know about Will.

WILLIE
He’s hopeless. As queer as they get.

PHOEBE
Are you kissing cousins?

WILLIE
Hell, no.
(grins)
How do you know about him?

PHOEBE
Rumors. People say he likes boys.
(lowers her voice)
Even black boys.

WILLIE
No kidding.

PHOEBE
But Will’s what the Jews call a--
I think it’s mensch. He’s got guts. He does the right thing. He fought very bravely in the war. And just last year, he helped his father get rid of the Klan. Don’t underestimate him, Willie. Many people respect him despite the poetry and the--boys.

WILLIE
Tell me about the black boys.

PHOEBE
(hesitates)
There’s a gardener named Ernest?

WILLIE
My God. Of course. I met him.
(thoughtfully)
He’s certainly cute enough.
PHOEBE
That’s an odd thing to say.

WILLIE
Phoebe, my dear, I am a voluptuary from L.A. Now then. May I have the honor of a kiss?

Wide-eyed, PHOEBE nods. WILLIE suavely kisses her. He gropes her breasts. PHOEBE shivers. She throws her arms around WILLIE’S neck.

INT. PERCY PARLOR -- DAY

A week later. WILLIE sits on a sofa, reading. WILL enters, takes a seat. WILLIE looks up. WILL gestures at paintings on the walls.

WILL
Aunt Lady has a wonderful painting of the three Armstrong sisters. You know who they were?

WILLIE
Connected to General George Armstrong Custer?

WILL
That’s right.

WILLIE
(smiles)
If the Percys have a suicide curse, the addition of Armstrong-Custer blood must have given it an extra wallop!

WILL
I’d never thought of that. I suppose it’s true.

(pause)
Your mother has three very fine Percy portraits. Are they out in L.A.?

WILLIE
Of course. Why do you ask?

WILL
Oh. It seems a--well, an incongruous place for them to be.

WILLIE

How so?

WILL

It’s so far from the ancestral lands. And so... Modern.

WILLIE

Are you suggesting that they would be better off here?

WILL

I don’t know how much your mother values them. Is she attached to them?

WILLIE

Jesus! Of course she loves them! She talks about the Percys all the time. It fascinates her friends!

WILL

Oh, sorry. I didn’t mean to...

WILLIE

Suggest that she’s not a real Percy? Because her people worked a country tobacco farm in Kentucky?

WILL

No, no, no...

WILLIE

Come on. Admit it. The Percys never thought that Munnie was good enough to marry one of them. And a lot of other people thought the same. That’s why she’s been on the run all these years. After Daddy died, she was helpless in Memphis. Society scorned her!

WILL

Oh, dear. I am so sorry.

WILLIE
You can be sure that having those portraits in L.A. is a great comfort and asset to Munnie.

WILL

Please don’t be angry.

WILLIE

Angry? I’ve been angry my entire life! The condescension you all have shown!

WILL

Now you listen to me, young man. Your father took great pains to educate your mother. He saw to it that she became a refined, cultivated woman.

WILLIE

Which of course means that when he met her, she was no-account trash. And I’m sure you’ve never forgotten that he started seeing her when she was just fifteen.

WILL

You are being far too touchy.

WILLIE

Tell me something, Will. How does your father feel about the fact that you are a homosexual?

WILL gasps, stands, leaves the room.

INT. PERCY LIBRARY -- NIGHT

The same day. WILL and LEROY are having a private chat.

WILL

I don’t like him.

LEROY

What’s the problem?

WILL

He’s a cold, manipulative, greedy little bastard with a façade of charm.
LEROY
He’s awfully bright. And apparently, Caroline brought him up well.

WILL
That’s why you invited him here. To see what kind of job she did.

LEROY
Give him a chance! As you yourself pointed out to him—he has a responsibility to continue the line.

To that, WILL has no reply.

INT. PERCY PARLOR -- NIGHT

ERNEST (handsome young gardener) serves drinks to LEROY, CAMILLE, WILL, and WILLIE.

CAMILLE
He’s late. It’s almost dinnertime.

LEROY
Roy’s rarely late. Especially the eve of a shoot.

WILLIE
I’m looking forward to meeting him. And to the shoot. Quail—I just love it!

SOUND OF: The front door opening, slamming shut. ROY PERCY enters the parlor, weaving a bit.

LEROY
There you are. Have you had a couple?

ROY
The bartender on the train was very persuasive.

(to ERNEST)
Bourbon, please. Neat.

(to WILLIE)
So you’re the long-lost cousin!

WILLIE stands to shake hands with ROY.
WILLIE
Very glad to meet you. I hear you’re a savagely good shot.

LEROY and ROY grin.

LEROY
You’ll see tomorrow.

EXT. WOODS -- DAY

LEROY and ROY walk through woods with shotguns.

ROY
Where’s the boy?

LEROY
He’ll catch up. So, how’ve you been?

ROY
Not too well. I drink too much. It worries Mattie Sue.

Hidden from their view behind a thicket, WILLIE squats, listening.

LEROY
The crouching beast?

ROY nods.

LEROY
Have you thought about that clinic? The Phipps outfit at Johns Hopkins?

ROY
Yes, I’ve thought about it. It might be necessary.

LEROY stops walking.

LEROY
Let’s wait for Willie.

(pause)
I’m worried, Roy. This is serious. You must take care of yourself.
(nods)
What do you think of Willie?

LEROY
A sturdy, brash lad. He’ll make a fine lawyer. But let’s talk about you.

They move on. After a moment, WILLIE runs after them.

INT. GREENVILLE TRAIN STATION -- DAY

Late spring, 1924. WILL stands with WILLIE on the platform. WILLIE has suitcases. A train hisses.

WILL
I’m glad that we managed to become friends. At the start, things were a bit rocky.

WILLIE
Yes. I let my temper get the better of me. And I’m sorry about that.

WILL
You did very well in school. Father was impressed when you won first prize in the State Latin contest.

WILLIE
I am grateful for the entire experience. Including the Southern belles.

WILL
(smiles faintly)
God knows how many wenches in Washington County are pregnant with Percy bastards.

WILLIE
(smirks)
One has--ah--certain responsibilities. Will, what is the “crouching beast”?

WILL
What brings that up?
WILLIE
Last fall, when I went hunting with your father and Roy, your father menioned it. I was taking a pee behind a tree when they walked by. They didn’t know I could hear.

WILL
It’s family lingo for depression.

WILLIE
So that means--?

WILL
Yes. Roy’s in trouble.

They both ponder the idea, eyeing each other.

WILL
I know what you’re thinking. And I’ll say this: You do have a good shot at becoming the leading Percy. You’ve got the brains, the charm, the drive. And boy, you sure do have the looks.

WILLIE
Gee. Thanks.

WILL
Don’t screw it up.

WILLIE
(indignant)
I won’t!

WILL
Don’t be so sure. Watch out for the beast, Willie! Don’t let it get you.

WILLIE gapes at WILL.

WILL
So long, then. Have a great time at Stanford.

WILL extends his hand. WILLIE shakes it, speechless. For once, he cannot think of anything at all to say.
INT. HUGER JERVEY’S APARTMENT, NYC -- NIGHT

Summer, 1924. HUGER and WILL sit with a fastidiously dressed MAN about WILL’S age.

MAN
(to WILL)
I don’t get it. What on earth is the matter with your family?

HUGER
Believe me, Lindley, the longer one knows Will Percy, the more mysterious it all becomes.

LINDLEY
I mean, compared to them, you seem--perfectly normal.

All three laugh.

WILL
But compared to others, I’m abnormal?

LINDLEY
Put it this way, girlfriend. You have eccentricities.

WILL
Thank God, I suppose. Thank goodness for our eccentricities. What would we be without them?

HUGER
A horrifying thought.

LINDLEY
Horrifying.

They giggle.

LINDLEY
I must say, however, that your father seems reasonably sane.

WILL thinks about it.
WILL
I revere Father beyond words but there are times when I cannot stand him. Maybe that’s because he does so effortlessly what I cannot do. But which, as his heir, I’m expected to do.
(twirls a hand)
Huger will tell you: I’ve been very resolute. From my first breath I’ve defied all expectations. Since birth my queer streak has been a mile wide.

LINDLEY
And you’ve gotten away with it. How?

WILL
I really don’t know!

LINDLEY
Impressive.
(looks at HUGER)
This is very abnormal.

HUGER
In Mississippi it is. Not so much here.

LINDLEY
Can you begin to imagine? Mississippi.
(sips a martini)
I want to know more about the beast.

WILL
Here’s the thing. Father is the patriarch, I’m the designated heir. But only provisionally. If Father saw another Percy coming along to fill his shoes, he would no doubt help him do it—just as he tried to do it with cousin Roy, who’s now going over the deep end. Like his father Walker did.

LINDLEY
OK. The beast has devoured your rival. And so your father is stuck with you. But what about that hot little cousin in California?
WILL
I don’t think he’ll make it.

LINDLEY
Why?

WILL He’s amoral.

LINDLEY
Because he has a lot of sex?

WILL
No. Because he lies.

HUGER
Everyone lies. For survival. The three of us, for example.

WILL
Willie lies in a different way. He cheats. There is a difference.
(looks away)
I’m quite sure the beast will get him.

LINDLEY
So that leaves you. Amazing.

WILL
It’s incredible. I will become the patriarch.

HUGER
You should abdicate.

WILL
Because somebody might shoot me? For being a fag?
(examines his immaculate fingernails)
No. It’s in my blood. I’m going through with it.

LINDLEY
I don’t see how you can possibly do that. Will—your poetry alone. It’s full of boys. Boys, boys, boys.
WILL
We’re living in the age of Corydon. Of Marcel Proust! A La Recherche...
(smilie)

HUGER and LINDLEY stare at WILL.

WILL
Somehow, even in Greenville, I will survive.
